

Great Radio Personalities

in historic photographs

by Anthony Slide

GREAT RADIO PERSONALITIES

In Historic Photographs

Anthony Slide

The Vestal Press, Ltd.

Vestal, NY 13851-0097

This book is for Rudy Vallee, who represented the best in American popular entertainment

Also by Anthony Slide

Early American Cinema (1970)
The Griffith Actresses (1973)
The Idols of Silence (1976)
The Big V: A History of the Vitagraph Company (1976; revised 1987)
Early Women Directors (1977; revised 1984)
Aspects of American Film History prior to 1920 (1978)
Films on Film History (1979)
The Kindergarten of the Movies: A History of the Fine Arts Company (1980)
The Vaudevillians (1981)
Great Radio Personalities in Historic Photographs (1982)
A Collector's Guide to Movie Memorabilia (1983)
Fifty Classic British Films: 1932-1982 (1985)
A Collector's Guide to TV Memorabilia (1985)
The American Film Industry: A Historical Dictionary (1986)
Great Pretenders (1986)
Fifty Classic French Films: 1912-1982 (1987)
The Cinema and Ireland (1988)

With Edward Wagenknecht

The Films of D.W. Griffith (1975)
Fifty Great American Silent Films: 1912-1920 (1980)

Frontispiece: Burns and Allen: George Burns (1896-) and Gracie Allen (1902-1964). Without question the greatest partnership in the history of vaudeville, radio and television, Burns and Allen made their radio debut not in America but in England, on the BBC, in June of 1929. They were first heard on CBS with Guy Lombardo in 1932 and soon thereafter The Burns and Allen Show became a radio perennial, making a happy transition to television on October 12, 1950. One of the radio highspots of 1933 was Gracie's search for her supposedly lost brother, which required that she pop up unexpectedly on any CBS program.

Copyright © 1982 by Anthony Slide.
All rights reserved under Pan American and International Copyright Conventions.

Published in Canada by General Publishing Company, Ltd., 30 Lesmill Road, Don Mills, Toronto, Ontario.

Published in the United Kingdom by Constable and Company, Ltd., 10 Orange Street, London WC2H 7EG.

Great Radio Personalities in Historic Photographs is a new work, first published by Dover Publications, Inc., in 1982.

Manufactured in the United States of America
The Vestal Press, Ltd.
P.O. Box 97
Vestal, NY 13851-0097

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Slide, Anthony.

Great radio personalities in historic photographs.

1. Radio broadcasters—Portraits. I. Title.

PN1991.4.A2S54 1988 791.44'092'2 88-5558
ISBN 0-911572-72-4

INTRODUCTION

“RADIO SWEEPING COUNTRY—1,000,000 sets in use”: front-page headline in Variety (March 10, 1922).

Like that other great entertainer of mankind, the cinema, radio was not the result of one man's labors, but rather the end product of the pioneering work of various scientists, including James C. Maxwell, Heinrich Hertz, Guglielmo Marconi, Sir John Fleming and Lee De Forest. The commercial development of radio is generally credited to H. P. Davis, vice-president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, which opened the first regularly scheduled radio station in the United States, KDKA in East Pittsburgh, on November 2, 1920. KDKA was quickly followed by WBZ in Springfield, Massachusetts, which opened on September 27, 1921; WJZ, which opened in Newark, New Jersey, on October 1, 1921, and KYW, which opened in Chicago on November 11, 1921. Commercial radio came into being on August 28, 1922, when WEA in New York broadcast the first sponsored program.

American Telephone & Telegraph controlled the long-distance lines and thus controlled the growth of the radio network. However, in 1926, A. T. & T. sold its radio holdings, including WEA, to the Radio Corporation of America, which already owned a number of stations, including WJZ, WJY in New York and WRC in Washington, D.C. From the Radio Corporation of America came the National Broadcasting Company, which in 1927 formed two networks from the stations owned by A. T. & T. and those owned by R.C.A. These two networks were named the Red and the Blue from the colors of the sheaths covering the network wires. That same year, 1927, the Columbia Broadcasting System was formed with a basic network of 16 stations in the Eastern United States. In 1943, NBC was required by the government to sell its Blue network, which it did to Edward J. Noble's American Broadcasting Company, and historic station WJZ was renamed WABC. The Mutual network had come into being in 1936 with the uniting of four local stations, WOR in New York, WGN in Chicago, WLW in Cincinnati and WXYZ in Detroit. The Mutual network was acquired in 1958 by the Hal Roach Studios.

Duston's Radio Log and Call Book for 1926 reveals that a typical radio station, WEA in New York, broadcast an average of seven hours a day, excluding Sundays. To fill those hours performers were needed. First they came from the stage and the concert platform, introduced by anonymous announcers, and it was not until the late Twenties or early Thirties that radio came to develop its own stars. Interestingly, the evolution of the radio celebrity coincides with radio's domination of popular entertainment in America, taking over, as it did, a mantle previously worn by the motion picture and by vaudeville.

The link with vaudeville is a strategic one, for it was from vaudeville that the majority of radio's stars came. The “crude and congenitally amateur” radio programs of the Twenties that Robert Landry mentions in his 1946 book This Fascinating Radio Business were replaced by shows starring such major vaudeville figures as Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor and Ed Wynn. Brilliant young personalities such as Rudy Vallee were sounding the death knell for the likes of Harry Horlick and the A & P Gypsies. These new radio stars turned radio into nothing more than a glorified vaudeville show, just as they and others were to do with television in the late Forties and early Fifties. Supporting these new radio stars were radio's own peculiar creations, the countless announcers, so many in number that in 1937 Variety reported that about 150 of them a week moved from station to station. The marvelous thing about radio was that it encouraged vaudevillians to change and perfect their acts. The obvious example here is Fred Allen, probably radio's greatest star. It was Allen who succinctly summed up the success of the radio comedian as lying “in his ability to make the orchestra on his program laugh uproariously during the broadcast. Through hearing the background of guffawing in the studio the sponsor, listener, and average critic are all convinced that the comedian is a riot despite the fact that they can see nothing funny about the entire business.”

Unlike today's network television, commercial radio provided more than merely comedy and music. It offered serious drama and music on a scale unequalled even by today's selection on public television. NBC could proudly boast of its symphony orchestra under the leadership of Arturo Toscanini. Orson Welles, Burgess Meredith, Norman Corwin and others were providing unsurpassed dramatic presentations. Lux Radio Theatre and similar programs offered adaptations of screen classics. In 1938, one could tune in to the Kate Smith program and listen to Lillian and Dorothy Gish in a 15-minute adaptation of Orphans of the Storm, while ten years later radio dramatized Malcolm Lowry's Under the Volcano, which to this day has proven too difficult a subject for the cinema to tackle.

Variety, the entertainment weekly, first reviewed a radio program on May 10, 1923, a musical show from the Capitol Theatre in New York, introduced by S. L. Rothafel (better known as “Roxy”) and broadcast over WEA. “Radio Reports” first appeared as a regular feature in Variety on January 7, 1931 (with reviews of Phil Spitalny and His Orchestra, Ted Lewis, Gus Van, the Finkenberg Hour, Pat Rooney and Son, and others), and that is as good a time as any from which to date the beginning of the golden age of radio. That golden age ended for radio when it was superseded as America's most popular form of entertainment by television in the early Fifties.

This volume offers rare photographs and capsule biographies (emphasizing the radio careers) of the great stars of radio's golden age. All the major figures are here, from the Happiness Boys and Vaughn De Leath to Frank Sinatra and Jack Webb. Aside from radio's major stars, I have tried to include a good sampling of those personalities whose time on radio is largely forgotten but who, hopefully, thanks to the very nature of the ether waves, are entertaining still the inhabitants of other galaxies out in space. To those privileged to have heard them, Johnny Marvin, Nat Brusiloff, Whispering Jack Smith, the Clicquot Club Eskimos and Edna Wallace Hopper are still held in affectionate memory. Not included are the majority of performers who starred in the various soap operas and mystery series, such as The Romance of Helen Trent, Little Orphan Annie, This Is Nora Drake and The Lone Ranger, because my feeling is that it was not the actresses and actors who were stars but rather the characters that they portrayed. Everyone today knows the Lone Ranger and most people identify the role—an outrageous legal decision to the contrary—with television's Clayton Moore, but few will recall Jack Deeds, Earle Graser and Brace Beemer, all of whom portrayed the masked hero on radio.

Jessica Dragonette on the Cities Service Concert (NBC) in the early Thirties, with Rosario Bourdon's orchestra and announcer Ford Bond.

Kay Kyser's show (NBC) in session, with Professor Kyser addressing the comedian Ish Kabibble.

Overall view of The Jack Benny Program (NBC) in the early Forties, with Phil Harris leading his orchestra and, in the foreground, left to right, Benny, Mary Livingstone, Dennis Day, Eddie Anderson and Don Wilson.

My basic source for factual information on radio programs and radio personalities was the radio section of Variety from the Thirties through the Fifties. In addition, the following books were immensely helpful: Treadmill to Oblivion by Fred Allen (Little, Brown and Company, 1954), The Big Broadcast by Frank Buxton and Bill Owen (The Viking Press, 1972), Tune in Yesterday by John Dunning (Prentice-Hall, 1976), There's Laughter in the Air by John Gaver and Dave Stanley (Greenberg, 1945), This Thing Called Broadcasting by Alfred Goldsmith and Austin C. Lescarboursa (Henry Holt and Company, 1930), This Fascinating Radio Business by Robert Landry (Bobbs-Merrill, 1946) and two volumes from the Thirties, Who's Who in Radio and Stars of Radio, both published with absolutely no indication as to their years of publication, their compilers or even their publishers.

The majority of photographs come from my own collection. For additional photographs and for help in researching the capsule biographies I am grateful to the Margaret Herrick Library of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, John Belton, Robert Bloch, Eddie Brandt, Robert Cushman, Bill Doyle, Robert A. Evans, Robert Gitt, Peter Hanson, Mike Ilawks, Ronnie James, Richard Lamparski, David McCain, Al Rinker, Roger Robles, Herb Sterne, the Wisconsin Center for Film and Theater Research and my editor at Dover, Stanley Appelbaum. Special thanks also to Vet Boswell, Norman Corwin, Dresser Dahlstead, Ralph Edwards, Alice Frost, Betty Garde, Lanny Ross, Arnold Stang and Ezra Stone. The Oscar statuette is the copyrighted property of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the phrase Oscar is a registered trademark and service mark; both are used with permission.

A. S.

Notes:

(1) The frontispiece and the 235 illustrations in the body of the book are strictly portraits, whereas the three Introduction figures serve as background documents, offering fascinating overall views of popular programs in actual session.

(2) There is no index of the stars depicted because the arrangement of the book is alphabetical (aside from a number of very minor shifts to achieve a better page balance). A few pictures, however, show more than one star and only one personality per picture could be used as alphabetical anchor man. In the case of teams (such as Abbott and Costello), the first of the two names is used for alphabetizing. Here is the location, by picture number, of the other personalities whom it might otherwise be difficult to find (an asterisk indicates the presence of a capsule biography): Joseph Curtin (No. 90), William Daly (No. 214), Peter Donald (; No. 71), Cliff Hall (No. 177), Phil Harris (; No. 82), Alois Havrilla (No. 214), Portland Hoffa (No. 6), Benita Hume (No. 55), Tony Labriola (No. 164), William S. Paley (No. 213), Minerva Pious (; No. 71), Jacques Renard (No. 53), Herb Shriner (; No. 99), Penny Singleton (; No. 132) and Don Wilson (; No. 221).

GREAT RADIO PERSONALITIES

In Historic Photographs

1. Bud Abbott (1895–1974; below) and Lou Costello (1906–1959). After many years in burlesque and vaudeville, Abbott and Costello were first heard on radio in 1938 as regulars on The Kate Smith Hour, on which the pair introduced their immortal “Who’s on First” routine to the radio audience. Appearances with Edgar Bergen and as a summer replacement for Fred Allen followed, as did a Universal contract, which was to star Abbott and Costello in 35 feature films together. Between 1942 and 1950, Abbott and Costello had their own radio program, first on NBC and later on ABC. 2. Goodman (1899–1982) and Jane (1905–1974) Ace. Goodman Ace was a Kansas newspaperman who, in 1928, married Jane Sherwood and entered radio with KMBC-Kansas City. The couple moved to Chicago in 1931 with their program titled The Easy Aces and it soon became a firm favorite on CBS, later moving to NBC and then back to CBS before it ended its run in 1945. Jane was the dumb wife and Goodman the ever-patient and happy-to-explain husband; she was known as the Mistress of Malapropism, coming out with phrases such as “We’re insufferable friends,” “Time wounds all heels” or “We are all cremated equal.” The couple returned to CBS in 1948–1949 with a program titled Mr. Ace & Jane, sponsored by Army-Airforce Recruiting. Goodman Ace was responsible for the scripts for the shows and also wrote for Danny Kaye, Perry Como, Milton Berle and Sid Caesar as well as creating CBS’s You Are There.

1

2

1

3

4

3. Roy Acuff (1903–). Generally recognized as the King of Country Music, Roy Acuff is an accomplished singer, fiddler, bandleader and composer, whose best-known songs include “Wabash Cannon Ball,” “The Great Speckled Bird” and “The Precious Jewel.” Even before NBC network coverage of The Grand Ole Opry in 1939, Acuff was a regular on the program and, in time, became its greatest star. 4. Mason Adams (1919–). Before becoming Charlie Hume on television’s Lou Grant, Mason Adams was a major star of radio soap operas from 1946 through 1960, appearing on upwards of four live shows a day. He is best remembered as Pepper Young on NBC’s Pepper Young’s Family (1945–1959). 5–7. Fred Allen (1894–1956). Vaudeville and revue star Fred Allen came to radio, with CBS, on October 23, 1932, in The Linit Bath Club Revue. The Salad Bowl Revue and The Sal Hepatica Revue followed before Allen hit his stride in 1934 with Town Hall Tonight (on NBC). In 1939, Town Hall Tonight became The Fred Allen Show, last heard on June 26, 1949. An intellectual in a radio world peopled by imbecile sponsors and network executives, Allen was forever feuding with his bosses, but, nonetheless, week after week turned out some of the best scripts heard on radio before or since. His autobiography, Treadmill to Oblivion (Little, Brown and Company, 1954), is a brilliant and humorous study of radio as seen through the eyes of one of the medium’s greatest stars. In 6, Allen is shown with his wife, Portland Hoffa, who acted with him. In 7, he is seen with Jack Benny (see also No. 30 and Introduction figure). Their famous feud started in January of 1937 when Allen had a youthful violinist named Stuart Kanin on his program. The young lad played a difficult composition which led Allen to ad-lib, “Just imagine, this young man can play a piece perfectly that Benny can’t even attempt after practicing for 40 years.” Thus began a feud which was to become a national institution.

5

6

7

8

8. Mel Allen (1913–). The Voice of the Yankees from 1939 through 1964, Mel Allen was one of the top CBS sportscasters on both radio and television. In addition, when Allen first joined CBS in January of 1936 he worked as an announcer on such non-sports programs as This Day Is Ours. 9. Steve Allen (1921–). Composer, author, pianist, comedian, actor, and for many years radio announcer: all of these titles fit Steve Allen, creator of NBC's The Tonight Show, PBS's Meeting of Minds and some of the best television programs of the past 30 years. Allen became an announcer on KOY-Phoenix in 1942, and in 1944 was to be heard in Los Angeles on KFAC and KMTR. He was a disc jockey on CBS in 1948, and thereafter moved on to films and television.

9

10

10. Fran Allison (1907–). Fran Allison entered radio in Waterloo, Iowa, in 1934, as a singer and announcer, but it was when she moved to Chicago shortly thereafter that she became known to NBC listeners on Smile Parade (1938–1939), Meet the Meeks (1947–1949) and, of course, The Breakfast Club, on which she was a regular, as Aunt Fanny, in the Thirties and Forties. On October 13, 1947, Fran Allison was seen for the first time, on WBKB-Chicago, in Kukla, Fran and Ollie and remained an integral part of that program into the 70's. 11. Don Ameche (1908–). After making his stage debut in Madison, Wisconsin, in 1928 and his New York debut the following year, Don Ameche concentrated on radio work from 1930 until 1936, when he left for Hollywood, appearing on Betty and Bob, The First Nighter, Grand Hotel and Jack Armstrong, the All American Boy, among many others, and all on NBC. After the start of his film career, which lasted through the Seventies, Ameche still found time for radio, appearing as a guest star and in the series The Bickersons (NBC and CBS, 1946–1947).

11

13

12. Amos 'n' Andy: Freeman F. Gosden (at left in photo; 1896–1982) and Charles J. Correll (1896–1972). Gosden was Amos and Correll was Andy, white men playing blacks, on one of radio's best-loved programs, Amos 'n' Andy, first heard on NBC on August 19, 1926, and last heard in 1960. The two men began on radio in the early Twenties and developed their dialect comedy routines on WGN-Chicago in 1925. Although Gosden and Correll could not appear as the characters they had created in the 1951–1953 television series, they did supervise the programs. Al Smith was absolutely right when he said, somewhat testily, in 1939, "A large part of the American people were more interested in Kingfish, the beauty parlor and the Fresh Air Taxi Company [the chief components of the show] than they were in the affairs of their country." 13. Eddie Anderson (1905–1977). One of the best-known black performers on radio, Eddie Anderson, as "Rochester," was a regular on Jack Benny's radio and television program from 1938 through 1964, asking that perpetual question in his familiar rasping voice: "What's that, boss?" In addition, Anderson was featured in more than 40 motion pictures between 1932 and 1963. (See also Introduction figure.) 14. Morey Amsterdam (1912–). Morey Amsterdam, an excellent gag writer not to mention an expert cellist, began in show business in a musical-comedy act with his brother. He entered radio as a master of ceremonies on a local Los Angeles station in 1930, and later joined Al Pearce. Amsterdam was particularly busy in the Forties, having a regular series on WHN-New York, being a panelist on Stop Me If You've Heard This One on Mutual and having his own program, The Morey Amsterdam Show, first heard on CBS on July 10, 1948. Small wonder that Fred Allen once remarked, "The only thing we can turn on in our house without getting Morey Amsterdam is the water faucet."

14

15

15. The Andrews Sisters: (right to left) LaVerne (1915–1967), Patty (1920–) and Maxene (1918–). The Andrews Sisters started out in kiddie revues in Minneapolis in the late Twenties, and it was not until 1937 that they hit the big time with their recording of “Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen.” Radio—The Dole Pineapple Show—followed, as did a record-breaking appearance at New York’s Paramount Theatre. Their recordings of “Beer Barrel Polka,” “Don’t Sit Under the Apple Tree” and “Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy,” among others, epitomize the Forties, when they were frequent guest stars on radio and had their own show, Eight-to-the-Bar Ranch (ABC, 1944), which became N-K Musical Show (CBS, 1946).

16. Eve Arden (1912–). A talented and versatile comedienne, Eve Arden became prominent on radio in the mid-Thirties on The Ken Murray Program, while also making a name for herself on stage. Films followed and then Miss Arden became a regular on The Danny Kaye Show (CBS, 1945) and The Sealtest Village Store (CBS, 1945–1948). On July 10, 1948, Eve Arden was first heard on CBS as Our Miss Brooks, the role with which she will always be associated, and which she also played on television from 1952 to 1956. Miss Arden was later seen on The Eve Arden Show (1957–1958) and The Mothers-in-Law (1967–1969) and continues to be active through the present.

17

17. Gene Austin (1900–1972). One of the most popular singers of his era, selling over 83,000,000 copies of his first hit, “My Blue Heaven,” Gene Austin was a radio favorite for two decades, best remembered for his regular appearances on The Joe Penner Show from 1936 onward. Austin was also a songwriter, partially responsible for “The Lonesome Road” and “When My Sugar Walks Down the Street,” among many others. Variety (May 3, 1932) described him as the “kingpin of the melody moaners when radio crooning was still considered away uptown.”

18

18. Gene Autry (1907–). Aside from starring in 93 feature films between 1934 and 1953, popular cowboy singing star Gene Autry found time to appear for 16 years on his own show, Gene Autry's Melody Ranch, first heard on CBS on January 7, 1940. “Where the pavement ends and the West begins” was where Autry and his countless fans were to be found every Saturday or Sunday night, except for a period during the Second World War when Autry was busy elsewhere.

19

19. Mildred Bailey (1903–1951). Radio's Rockin' Chair Lady, Mildred Bailey was the sister of Al Rinker of the Rhythm Boys—she took her last name from her first and short-lived marriage to one Ed Bailey. Paul Whiteman was impressed by her style of singing and featured her regularly on his early broadcasts, and by 1939, Mildred Bailey was a regular on Camel's Benny Goodman Show on the NBC-Blue network, being held over when Bob Crosby and His Orchestra took over. The Mildred Bailey Revue was a popular CBS feature in the early Forties. 20. Olga Baclanova (1899–1974). An exotic Russian actress who starred in a number of American films in the late Twenties and early Thirties, Olga Baclanova was heard from time to time on radio in the Thirties, particularly on Olga Baclanova's Continental Revue (1937), despite critics' complaints that her accent made it hard to understand who were her guests.

20

21

22

23

24

25

21. Art Baker (1898–1966). Art Baker gave guided tours at Los Angeles' famed Forest Lawn cemetery before entering radio as master of ceremonies on such shows as Hollywood in Person (CBS, 1937–1938), People Are Funny (1942–1943) and Never Too Old (Mutual, 1945). He was Bob Hope's announcer for a while and for 20 years, from 1938, hosted Art Baker's Notebook on KFI-Los Angeles. Beginning in 1951, Baker was master of ceremonies for television's You Asked For It. 22. Phil Baker (1896–1963). After appearing in vaudeville in partnership with Ben Bernie and in a series of revues in the Twenties, comedian-accordionist Phil Baker gained his first major radio exposure thanks to Rudy Vallee. In 1933, he was given his own radio program as The Armour Jester on the NBC-Blue network, and he continued to star on his own show through 1938. In 1939, Baker was featured in Honolulu Bound on CBS, and in 1941 he took over as host of the CBS quiz show Take It or Leave It, with which Baker remained through 1947. He retired in 1955 and moved with his Danish-born wife to Copenhagen, where he died. 23. Kenny Baker (1912–1985). A pleasant, good-looking performer with a rich tenor voice, Kenny Baker made his professional radio debut in 1930 on a Long Beach, California, station. Jack Benny heard him at Los Angeles' Coconut Grove and brought Baker onto his program in 1935. After his appearances on Pahst's Blue Ribbon Town in 1943, Baker was voted radio's number-one tenor of 1944. He made frequent guest appearances on various shows and was also heard regularly on ABC's Glamor Manor in the Forties. 24. Lucille Ball (1910–). A film comedienne from the mid-Thirties onwards, Lucille Ball became popular on radio in the Forties as a guest performer and as the star of My Favorite Husband (CBS, 1948–1951). Her television series I Love Lucy (CBS, 1951–1961) was also heard on radio for a time. 25. Smith Ballew (1902–1984). A good-looking singer and bandleader, Smith Ballew had played with Ted Fio Rito, Ben Pollack and Freddie Rich before forming his own orchestra for vaudeville and nightclubs. He was featured on many radio programs and, in 1936, took over from Al Jolson as host of Shell Chateau, opening the program with "Tonight There Is Music in the Air" and closing it with "Home."

26. Tallulah Bankhead (1902–1968). One of the major theatrical personalities of this century, of whose voice Fred Allen said it was like a man pulling his foot out of a pail of yogurt, Tallulah Bankhead made her radio debut with Rudy Vallee on February 15, 1934. She was to be a frequent guest star on Vallee's show as well as on Time to Smile (NBC, 1941), The Raleigh Room and The Fred Allen Show, on which, on October 27, 1946, she and Allen performed the classic skit "The Mr. and Mrs. Breakfast Broadcasting Satire." Tallulah Bankhead was the star of the last major variety program on radio, NBC's The Big Show (1950–1952). 27. Pat Barrett (1887–1959). Pat Barrett, former farmer and vaudevillian, was radio's Uncle Ezra, first heard on WTMJ-Milwaukee in 1929, and a year later moving to WLS-Chicago. He had his own show on NBC in the Thirties and Forties, supposedly originating from the rural Rosedale Station E-Z-R-A, and was also a favorite on The National Barn Dance. 28. André Baruch (1906–). French-born André Baruch came to the United States at the age of 13 and became one of the more familiar voices on radio, a commercial spokesman for Lucky Strike for 22 years and the voice for U.S. Steel. Baruch was announcer for Kate Smith, Stoopnagle and Budd and, of course, Your Hit Parade, which began on NBC in the spring of 1935. With his wife, Bea Wain, Baruch is still to be heard on radio.

26

27

28

29

29. William Bendix (1906–1964). William Bendix, whose screen career as a likeable tough guy spanned the years from 1942 until his death, came to radio in 1943 with The Life of Riley on NBC. Chester A. Riley was initially played on television in 1950 by Jackie Gleason and the show was promptly canceled, but in 1953 William Bendix brought the character back and continued to play him until 1958; the radio program had ended in 1951. 30. Jack Benny (1894–1974). Vaudeville and early talkies made Jack Benny a star, but it was radio that kept him a star. He made his radio debut on the Ed Sullivan program on March 29, 1932, and, as a result, was signed as master of ceremonies for The Canada Dry Ginger Ale Program on NBC. Jack Benny remained the star of the shows that followed, but the titles changed with the sponsors: The Chevrolet Program, beginning March 3, 1933, The General Tire Program, beginning April 6, 1934, The Jello Program, beginning October 14, 1934, The Grape Nuts Program, beginning October 14, 1942, and The Jack Benny Program, beginning October 1, 1944 (all NBC). Benny moved to CBS on January 2, 1949, and his radio program was last heard on May 22, 1955, making a magnificent total of 924 shows in 23 years. (See also No. 7 and Introduction figure.)

30

31

31. Gertrude Berg (1899–1966). Gertrude Berg gained lasting fame as the Jewish matriarch Molly Goldberg, star of The Rise of the Goldbergs, which Mrs. Berg also wrote, and which was heard, not always continuously, from 1929 through 1945, first on NBC and later on CBS. After its success on television in 1949, it returned to CBS radio for a season. Gertrude Berg was a prolific writer, turning out more than 15,000,000 words during her career, and, in addition to The Goldbergs, wrote and starred in House of Glass (NBC, 1934) and also wrote Kate Hopkins, Angel of Mercy (CBS, 1940–1943). In addition, Gertrude Berg found time to bring the Goldberg family to vaudeville, to the Broadway stage in Molly and Me (1948) and to the printed page with The Rise of the Goldbergs (1931) and The Molly Goldberg Cookbook (1955); Mrs. Berg also appeared in other stage roles, notably as Mrs. Jacoby in A Majority of One (1959). Brooks Atkinson summed up the secret of the appeal and success of this remarkable woman when he wrote, “Mrs. Berg is a real human being who believes in the people she writes about and is not ashamed of their simplicity.” 32. Edgar Bergen (1903–1978). The extraordinary thing about Edgar Bergen is that he managed to make a name for himself as a ventriloquist on radio, with his best-known dummies being Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd (first introduced November 1939). Bergen made radio audiences laugh from 1936, when he appeared as a guest of Rudy Vallee, through 1956. The Charlie McCarthy Show, as it was titled, was first heard on NBC, under the sponsorship of Chase and Sanborn, on May 9, 1937. Chase and Sanborn, NBC and Bergen parted company in 1948, and thereafter the ventriloquist was heard on CBS under the sponsorship of Coca Cola, Richard Hudnut, Lanolin, Chicken of the Sea and Kraft. (See also No. 71.)

33

33. Milton Berle (1908–). He might have been Mr. Television, but Milton Berle was also remarkably active in radio, although never as successful as he was to be on television. Berle was featured on Stop Me If You've Heard This One (NBC, 1939), Three-Ring Time (Mutual, 1941), Let Yourself Go (NBC-Blue, 1944) and The Milton Berle Show (NBC, 1947). He had made his radio debut in 1934 after serving time in vaudeville and clubs.

34

34. Ben Bernie (1891–1943). After working in vaudeville with Phil Baker, Ben Bernie, the Old Maestro, took over a band and brought it to a local New York radio station in 1923. Thanks to a long-running feud with Walter Winchell, Bernie's name became known to millions of radio listeners, and he was to be heard on his own network programs from 1931 until his death. Bernie was a colorful personality, noted for the intimate manner of his comments, his fat cigars and his catchphrase, "Yowsah, Yowsah."

35

35. Mel Blanc (1908–). Blanc made his radio debut with KGW-Portland in 1927, but it was not until 1931, when he was on Portland's KEX, that he began to get a reputation for the voices that he could create. On May 22, 1934, Variety published a rave review of Blanc's Cobwebs and Nuts program on KEX. In 1937, Blanc became a regular on the Johnny Murray show out of KFWB-Los Angeles, and that same year signed a contract with the Warner Bros. cartoon department, for whom he was to create the voices of Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Tweety Pie, Porky Pig and countless others. Blanc joined Jack Benny in 1940 as a regular

36 on his program, and he will always be remembered for the characters of Monsieur Le Blanc, Sy the Mexican Gardener, the Maxwell Automobile and, of course, the railroad conductor announcing, "Ana-heim, A-zusa and Kook-amunga." In addition, Blanc was kept busy on dozens of other radio programs, too numerous to mention. 36. Irene Bordoni (1895–1953). The French-born entertainer noted for her saucy songs and the manner in which she rolled her big eyes had already been a successful star of vaudeville, musical comedy and revue before commencing her radio career in 1931 as the Coty Playgirl. Miss Bordoni was a guest singer on many variety programs as well as being featured on The RKO Hour.

37

37. Victor Borge (1909–). Borge made his debut as a professional concert pianist in his native Denmark at the age of ten. He came to America in 1940, when the Nazis overran Europe and, in December of 1941, appeared as a guest star on Bing Crosby's Kraft Music Hall. He remained with the show for the next 56 weeks. Early in 1943, Borge had his own five-minute radio show, for M-G-M, Mondays through Fridays, on the NBC-Blue network, and was then given the first major program of his own as a summer replacement for Fibber McGee and Molly. Borge made his American concert debut in 1945, but it was not until 1953 that he began giving the one-man shows for which he is so well known. 38. Bob and Ray: Bob Elliott (at left in photo; 1923–) and Ray Goulding (1922–). As The New Yorker (September 24, 1973) commented, Bob and Ray are "known in every swinging American household." Comedians in the tradition of Stoopnagle and Budd, they have created such memorable characters as T. Wilson Messy, Wally Ballou, Calvin L. Hoogevin, Webley Webster, Chester Harbrouck Frisbie and Mary McGoon. Bob made his radio debut in 1941, Ray in 1936, and the two first came together in 1946 on WHDH-Boston, where both were staff announcers. They have been broadcasting together ever since. 39. Major Edward Bowes (1874–1946).

38

"Around and around she goes, and where she stops nobody knows," intoned Major Bowes each week as he spun the wheel of fortune on his amateur hour, heard first on NBC and later on CBS, from 1934 until the Major's death. Major Bowes had already retired, a wealthy and successful man, in 1905, but the San Francisco earthquake and fire of the following year wiped out his fortune. He soon started building a second fortune in real estate, opening, in 1918, New York's Capitol Theatre, from which he broadcast his first radio program, Major Bowes' Capitol Family Hour, a regular Sunday morning feature on CBS until May of 1941. 40. The Boswell Sisters: (left to right) Martha Meldania Boswell (1905–1958), Constance Foore Boswell (1907–1976) and Helvetia George Boswell (1911–). On March 18, 1931, Variety wrote of the Boswell Sisters, "They qualify as a utility turn that can fit into various spots." And there lay the secret of the Boswell Sisters' success on radio in the Thirties. Martha and Connie had won an amateur radio contest as early as 1922, and the three sang together on WSMB-New Orleans in the mid-Twenties (contrary to all published reports, the sisters were not born in New Orleans). During 1929 and 1930, the Boswells were in Los Angeles, singing on KFWB, and in February of 1931 signed with NBC in New York to appear on Pleasure Hour. They moved to CBS in June of 1931, and got their first commercial sponsor, Baker Chocolate, in October of that year. During 1932, the Boswell Sisters were to be heard on Music That Satisfies, while in 1934 they co-starred with Bing Crosby on The Woodbury Hour. European appearances and vaudeville tours followed until 1936 when Vet retired to have a child and the group broke up. Connie had married the trio's manager, Harry Leedy, in 1935 and continued as a solo act through the Fifties. There were many other sister acts singing on radio in the Thirties, including the Brox Sisters, the Pickens Sisters and the Three X Sisters, but none achieved the lasting fame on radio or record of the Boswells.

39

40

21

41

41. William Boyd (1895–1972). William Boyd had been a popular leading man in silent films before becoming the screen's Hopalong Cassidy in 1934. Boyd brought Hopalong Cassidy to radio, on CBS, on Monday, August 11, 1941, and critics were quick to note that the program was obviously modeled after The Lone Ranger. Boyd enjoyed even greater popularity as the Western hero on the Mutual radio series of the Fifties. 42. Tom Breneman (1902–1948). With the announcement, "I'm Tom Breneman, now you can all applaud," Breneman would commence his immensely popular Breakfast in Hollywood program, which was heard over ABC every weekday morning at eight o'clock. Breneman would indulge in fast comic repartee with his female guests, sport a woman's hat and, quite often, put a middle-aged housewife over his knee and spank her. Women loved it, and flocked to the restaurant that Breneman owned (it was from there the show emanated) on Vine Street in Hollywood. Breakfast in Hollywood was first broadcast, on the NBC-Blue network, as Breakfast at Sardi's, coming from the Hollywood restaurant of that name, in 1941. After a vaudeville career as a song-and-dance man, Breneman became popular on local radio in 1930, performing "Tom and Wash" sketches on KFWB in Los Angeles. Other programs, such as Answer Auction on CBS (1940), followed. At the time of his death, Breakfast in Hollywood was still running, and Breneman was regarded as one of radio's favorite personalities, heard over 220 stations. 43. Fannie Brice (1891–1951). A star of the Ziegfeld Follies and vaudeville, Fannie Brice created one of radio's beloved characters, Baby Snooks (seen in the photo), on the radio version of the Follies on February 29, 1936. Neither Miss Brice nor Baby Snooks (with her famous simpering question, "Why, daddy?") was away from radio for the next 15 years until death put an end to the entertainer's career just as she was considering retirement.

42

44

44. Norman Brokenshire (1898–1965). With his folksy greeting of “How do you do, ladies and gentlemen, how do you do,” Norman Brokenshire became one of the great announcers of early radio, beginning with WJZ in the early Twenties and covering the presidential inaugurations of Coolidge (1925) and Hoover (1929). Alcohol was responsible for the demise of his career in 1934, but thanks to Alcoholics Anonymous he made a magnificent recovery, and returned to network radio as announcer for U.S. Steel’s Theatre Guild on the Air in 1945. 45. Billie Burke (1885–1970). A light comedienne on stage (from 1898) and in films (from 1915), Billie Burke was a frequent radio guest in the Thirties and Forties and also had her own show on CBS from 1944 through 1946.

45

46

46. Nat Brusiloff (circa 1904–1951). A concert performer at the age of five, composer-musician Nat Brusiloff became house conductor for CBS in 1929, working with Kate Smith, the Boswell Sisters, Morton Downey, Bing Crosby and others. Brusiloff moved to WMCA in 1933, and was noted not only for his music but also his comedy songs. A top radio orchestra leader of the Thirties. Nat Brusiloff remained active until his death.

48

49

47. Bob Burns (1890–1956). Bob Burns was radio’s philosophical humorist—similar in style to Will Rogers—who told of his relatives in the Ozarks and played a musical instrument of his own invention, the bazooka. As an NBC release once stated, “His stuff has the freshness and vigor of an Arkansas breeze.” Burns began his professional career in vaudeville in 1911, and entered radio in 1932. After several years with Bing Crosby on The Kraft Music Hall, Burns was given his own show, initially titled The Arkansas Traveler, on CBS, in 1941, sponsored by Campbell’s Soups, which ran until 1947 when Burns retired. 48. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman (1864–1936). The noted Brooklyn Congregational minister and syndicated columnist Samuel Parkes Cadman was a pioneer of religious broadcasting in the United States with his own Sunday series, The National Radio Pulpit, on NBC from the mid to the late Twenties. English-born Cadman was also the author of Charles Darwin and Other English Thinkers (1916), The Lure of London (1925) and Adventure for Happiness (1935). 49. Cab Calloway (1907–). Cab Calloway was probably the only black orchestra leader to be heard coast-to-coast on network radio in the Thirties. In 1941, he hosted Cab Calloway’s Quizzical on WOR, which was billed as Harlem’s own idea of what a musical quiz should be.

50

51

50. Judy Canova (1916–1983). Judy Canova was the hillbilly canary, once described as Arkansas' answer to Beatrice Lillie and Oklahoma's answer to Fannie Brice, although she was actually born in Florida. Judy Canova came to radio from vaudeville and films, and began her own show on CBS in the summer of 1943; it moved to NBC the following year and was to be heard through 1953. 51. Jack Carson (1910–1963). A nightclub entertainer with a song-and-dance act, who began in vaudeville, Jack Carson became the affable fall guy of radio and films. He was featured in The Signal Carnival (1941), The Jack Carson Show (1943–1947), Camel Comedy Caravan (1943) and The Sealtest Village Store (1947–1948), all on NBC.

52 & 53. Eddie Cantor (1892–1962). A brilliant comedian and an all-round entertainer who had become a major star from his appearances in the Ziegfeld Follies, vaudeville and musical comedies such as Kid Boots and Whoopee!, Eddie Cantor was a natural for radio, and his show, which began on NBC in 1931 and continued through 1949, was one of the medium's most popular. Cantor was first heard on radio in the early Twenties, but his first major triumph was as a guest on The Fleischmann Hour on February 5, 1931. In 53 he is seen with Rubinoff (see No. 194) and Jacques Renard (violinist, bandleader, music director) on The Texaco Hour, December 29, 1948.

52

53

54

54. Clicquot Club Eskimos. Sponsored by Canada Dry's major competitor, the Clicquot Club Eskimos belong to radio's early years, to the Twenties and the age of the Lucky Strike Orchestra, the A & P Gypsies and the Ipana Troubadours. Under the direction of Harry Reser (holding banjo in photo), the Clicquot Club Eskimos performed on NBC through the late Twenties. Among their number, all of whom broadcast in parkas, were Merle Johnston, Jimmy Brierly, Everett Clary and Raymond Knight (before he starred on The Cuckoo Hour).

55. Ronald Colman (1891–1958). Ronald Colman was a distinguished, quietly dignified, actor whose film career ran from the late Teens through the late Fifties. For a man who supposedly disliked radio, Colman was kept fairly busy in the medium, making guest appearances on several drama series, appearing from 1945 onward as an occasional guest with wife Benita Hume on Jack Benny's program, and being featured on The Circle (NBC, 1939), Everything for the Boys (NBC, 1944) and Favorite Story (1946–1949). Colman and Benita Hume are best remembered for The Halls of Ivy (NBC, 1950–1952), in which Colman played the head of an American college, a sort of Americanized Mr. Chips.

30

56

57

58

59

56. Phil Cook (1890–1958). Phil Cook (at left in photo) would play his ukelele and sing the news in rhyme and soon became a popular NBC performer, sometimes known as The Quaker Oats Man, after his sponsor, and featured on such programs as Cotton and Morpheus, Physical Culture Shoe Prince, The Klein Serenading Shoemaker and Cabin Door. Variety (December 11, 1935) reported, “Cook’s comedy is notable for its clarity, nuttiness and lively good spirits.” He would impersonate several rural characters on his show and his catchphrase “Okay, kernel!” was well known. Cook disappeared from radio in the late Thirties but returned, on August 16, 1944, to CBS with a new show titled Cook ‘n’ Corn, which he also wrote. He retired in 1952. Phil Cook is seen here on his 1938 CBS program, Phil Cook’s Almanac. 57. William Conrad (1920–). William Conrad is one of the best actors on television today, and some 30 years earlier he was one of the best actors on radio, to be heard in Johnny Madero, Pier 23 (Mutual, 1947), Nightbeat (NBC, 1950), Jason and the Golden Fleece (NBC, 1952–1953) and The CBS Radio Workshop (1956–1957), among others. He is best remembered as Matt Dillon on Gunsmoke (CBS, 1952–1961). Conrad has also been active in films from the mid-Forties on. 58. Father Charles E. Coughlin (1891–1979). In the Thirties, Father Coughlin, known as “The Fighting Priest,” was one of the more influential figures on radio, his anti-Semitic, pro-Fascist broadcasts creating considerable controversy. Coughlin was first heard on radio in 1926, and subsequently broadcast regularly on CBS until 1931 when the network tried to pre-censor his remarks. NBC would not touch him, and so Coughlin bought time on independent stations. Displeasure from the Vatican and America’s entry into the Second World War curtailed his radio activities and in 1942 his magazine Social Justice was banned as being seditious. Father Coughlin, the demagogue, once said, “If I threw away and denounced my faith . . . I would become the world’s champion crook. . . . I would get everything for myself that I could lay my hands on in this world.” 59. Russ Columbo (1908–1934). After coming to fame as a vocalist with Gus Arnheim’s Cocoanut Grove Orchestra in Los Angeles, Columbo became popular as a film star, composer and radio personality, being described in the early Thirties as one of the big three of radioland. An accidental shooting by photographer Lansing Brown put an end to Columbo’s career and to his life. 60. Jerry Colonna (1903–1986). A trombonist who began his career with the Columbia Symphony Orchestra (1931–1936), Jerry Colonna became Bob Hope’s dependable and crazy sidekick on the latter’s radio shows of the Forties. Colonna was also featured in many films from the late Thirties through the late Fifties.

60

61

61. Norman Corwin (1910–). Writer, director and producer Norman Corwin was one of the most talented and creative men on radio, a writer who recognized the potential of radio drama. In 1942, Carl Van Doren wrote, “Though other writers besides Norman Corwin have written plays to be broadcast on the air, and good ones, he stands out as an accomplished, acknowledged master. He is to American radio what Marlowe was to the Elizabethan stage.” Corwin came to the medium reading nightly news commentaries on WBZA and then introduced dramatized poetry readings, Poetic License, on WQXR in 1937. He is best known for his CBS series in the early Forties, By Corwin, This is War, An American in England and Columbia Presents Corwin. In the photo he is giving the radio cue for “Keep that level of sound.”

62

62. Jesse Crawford (1896–1962). Known as “The Poet of the Organ,” Jesse Crawford was probably the best known of radio organists, initially broadcasting over CBS on The Paramount-Public Hour, originating from New York’s Paramount Theatre, where Crawford and his wife had been resident organists since it opened in 1926. 63. Bing Crosby (1903–1977). Harry Lillis Crosby, Jr. made his radio debut in 1930 and the following year had his own 15-minute program on CBS. Crosby is best known on radio as the star of The Kraft Music Hall (1935–1946) and as the man largely responsible for the introduction of prerecorded programs to network radio. In addition to radio work through the Fifties, followed by many television appearances, Crosby starred in more than 50 feature films between 1932 and 1966.

63

64

64. Xavier Cugat (1900–). Born in Spain and raised in Cuba, Xavier Cugat came to New York at the age of 12. He founded his own Latin combo in 1928, and in 1931 created his first big band, becoming known as “The Man Who Made America Rumba-Conscious.” Cugat is best known on radio for Camel’s Romance and Rumbas (NBC, 1941) and The Xavier Cugat Show (NBC-Blue, 1943), sponsored by Dubonnet, which emphasized that “both are products of the U.S.A.” 65. Bill Cullen (1920–). Bill Cullen has never stopped working on radio or television since he joined WWSW-Philadelphia in 1939. In 1944, Cullen joined CBS in New York as a staff announcer; on that network he is known for Casey, Crime Photographer (1948–1949) and Hit the Jackpot (1948–1949), and on others for Quick as a Flash (ABC, 1949) and This Is Nora Drake (NBC, 1949–1959).

65

66

66. Joan Davis (1912–1961). A leading, cracked-voice comedienne of radio, television and films, Joan Davis entered show business at the age of seven as a child comic in vaudeville. She came to radio with Rudy Vallee in the summer of 1941, and between 1943 and 1945 was the star of NBC's The Sealtest Village Store. Miss Davis' other radio series include Jeanie's Tea Room (1945–1947) and Leave It to Joan (1949), both CBS. Joan Davis climbed to even greater heights of popularity on television with her I Married Joan series on NBC from 1952 through 1955. Between 1942 and 1946, the comedienne was voted Queen of Comedy by the Radio Editors of America.

67

67. Dresser Dahlstead (1910–). Dahlstead entered broadcasting as an announcer in Ogden, Utah, in 1930; he came to NBC in San Francisco in 1932, and in 1938 transferred to NBC in Hollywood. Named chief announcer for the Western Division of the NBC-Blue network in 1942, Dresser Dahlstead continued with the Blue network when it became ABC, and in 1951 was appointed program director of the ABC Western Division. In 1959, Dahlstead left ABC to join Ralph Edwards Productions, with which he has remained to the present. Among the best-known programs with which Dresser Dahlstead was associated are Death Valley Days, I Love a Mystery and The Standard Symphony Hour.

68

68. Dennis Day (1917–). Dennis Day was the resident comedy tenor on the Jack Benny program from 1939 until the show's demise. In addition, Day had his own program, A Day in the Life of Dennis Day (NBC, 1946–1951), and was also featured in a number of Fifties films. 69. Vaughn De Leath (1896–1943). Vaughn De Leath was the first First Lady of Radio and the medium's first crooner, whose voice was selected by Dr. Lee De Forest as that best suited to the radio microphone. She first broadcast in January of 1920 from De Forest's experimental studio and from that moment on was always associated with radio either as a performer or executive. In the Thirties, Miss De Leath was heard at breakfast time on WMCA in New York (1934) and on her own show, on WMCA, sponsored by Lydia Pinkham (1939), as well as being a regular guest on The Firestone Hour. 70. Walter Damrosch (1862–1950). Damrosch was one of the major figures in American serious music, staging the first event at Carnegie Hall in 1891, managing the Metropolitan Opera Company from 1885 to 1891, and reorganizing the New York Symphony in 1903 and remaining its director until it was merged with the New York Philharmonic in 1927. He first conducted a symphony concert on radio in 1925, and is best remembered for The Music Appreciation Hour on NBC-Blue from 1929 through 1942. After 20 years on the job, Damrosch retired as NBC's musical counsel in March of 1946. 71. Minerva Pious, Kenny Delmar and Peter

69

Donald greet Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy on a special radio salute to Fred Allen, broadcast on NBC on November 14, 1965. Kenny Delmar (1911–1984). In 1946, Kenny Delmar became the biggest star of Allen's Alley on The Fred Allen Show with his characterization of Senator Beaugard Claghorn, a bumptious, unreconstructed Southerner. Delmar had been active on radio since the Thirties, appearing in The Mercury Theatre on the Air, The March of Time and The Shadow, and also acting as Fred Allen's announcer. He was featured on Your Hit Parade (NBC, 1943) and The Henry Morgan Show (NBC, 1949–1950), and, as Senator Claghorn, was featured on records and in films. Peter Donald (1918–1979). Peter Donald, the British-born actor and dialect specialist, portrayed Ajax Cassidy, one of the residents of Allen's Alley on The Fred Allen Show in the Forties. Donald was also a member of the panel on Can You Top This? (1940–1953) and had his own 15-minute show in 1947, sponsored by Stanback Headache Powders. Minerva Pious (1904–1979). Russian-born Minerva Pious came to the United States at the age of two, and worked both on the stage and in films; in 1936 she replaced Fannie Brice in The Ziegfeld Follies. On The Fred Allen Show, Minerva Pious' Mrs. Nussbaum was a beloved resident of Allen's Alley, and Miss Pious was also featured on many other radio programs of the Thirties and Forties. (For Bergen and McCarthy, see No. 32.)

70

72

73

72. Cecil B. DeMille (1881–1959). One of Hollywood’s great pioneering producer-directors, Cecil B. DeMille hosted The Lux Radio Theatre on CBS from June 1, 1936, through January 22, 1945. He might have continued for another ten years as host had he not refused to pay a one-dollar levy by the American Federation of Radio Artists needed to fight a political battle. In refusing to pay that one dollar, DeMille gave up his $100,000-a-year salary and was never again to be featured on radio. 73. Morton Downey (1901–1985). Morton Downey began his professional career as a singer in the early ‘Twenties, and made his radio debut in England, on the BBC, in the late Twenties. Shortly thereafter he was signed by CBS, becoming the Camel Minstrel Boy in 1931. On February 18, 1931, Variety described Downey as the most popular new voice on radio, and his high-pitched tenor seemed a natural for the medium. “Carolina Moon” became the singer’s theme tune in the summer of 1931, replacing “Wabash Moon.” Downey was almost continually on radio in the Thirties and Forties, and as late as July 15, 1949, he was the star of The Ballad of James Otis, a special CBS presentation in association with the American Legion Auxiliary.

74

74. Paul Douglas (1907–1959). An ex-professional football player, Paul Douglas made his radio debut on WCAU-Philadelphia and soon became a key announcer on CBS in the Thirties, working with Burns and Allen, Jack Benny, Fred Waring and the Aces, among others, and in 1937/1938 he was presenting sports talks on NBC. Douglas got his big break in 1946, when he co-starred in the Broadway hit Born Yesterday, and two years later he embarked on a Hollywood film career. 75. Florence Desmond (1905–). The British stage and screen actress and impersonator Florence Desmond—seen here in the guise of Marlene Dietrich—had a brief vogue on American radio in 1933 after being introduced by Rudy Vallee on his Fleischmann program. Her imitations of film stars such as ZaSu Pitts, Garbo, Mac West and Tallulah Bankhead were superb.

75

76

76. Eddie Duchin (1909–1951). Pianist-bandleader Eddie Duchin was the darling of New York socialites. In between personal appearances before the smart set Duchin found time to combine melody and rhythm under the Pepsodent sponsorship on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights on WJZ in New York. He was also heard on other programs such as The Fire Chief (NBC, 1935) and The Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands (Mutual, 1941). Duchin's life story was filmed in 1956. 77. Jessica Dragonette (circa 1910–1980). To Jessica Dragonette must go the credit for popularizing operetta and semiclassical music on radio. In the Thirties, she was one of broadcasting's most popular stars, her soprano voice being heard in adaptations of many of the great operettas of the day, and in 1935 she was voted Radio's Favorite Woman Star. Miss Dragonette was first heard on radio in 1926, and her best-known series were The Philco Hour (NBC, 1927–1930), Cities Service Concert (NBC, 1929–1937), The Palmolive Beauty Box Theatre (CBS, 1937) and Saturday Night Serenade (ABC, 1944–1948). She was decorated by Pope Pius XII, made an honorary colonel in the air force in recognition of her war work, and in 1967 published her autobiography, Faith Is a Song. (See also Introduction figure.)

78

78. Jimmy Durante (1893–1980). A warm comic, whose singing Fred Allen likened to “a dull rasp calling its mate,” Jimmy Durante rose to prominence in vaudeville, in partnership with Eddie Jackson and Lou Clayton. Durante was active in radio from the early Thirties through the Fifties, but he is best remembered for the years 1943–1947 with Garry Moore on CBS’s Camel Caravan.

79

as Jeanette MacDonald’s somewhat wooden leading man in films (Naughty Marietta, Rose Marie, Maytime, etc.), Nelson Eddy was fairly active on radio in the Forties, turning to the new medium as his film career began to decline. He was a frequent guest star on The Bell Telephone Hour and, with Dorothy Kirsten, co-starred on The Kraft Music Hall (NBC, 1949).

80

80. Ruth Etting (1896–1978). A major Columbia recording star and a popular singer in radio's formative years, Ruth Etting was America's sweetheart of song, a torch singer best remembered for her rendition of "Ten Cents a Dance." Her life story was filmed, not too accurately, in 1955 as Love Me or Leave Me. Between 1929 and 1936, Etting appeared in three feature films and innumerable shorts, and was a regular on radio programs such as Chesterfield's Music That Satisfies (NBC, 1932). She retired in 1941, but returned to radio on January 21, 1947, for a guest spot with Rudy Vallee. 81. Ralph Edwards (1913–). Ralph Edwards began his professional career while still a student at the University of California at Berkeley. In the mid-Thirties, he became CBS staff announcer in New York, working on 45 network shows a week, and from that graduated to featured news reader on Headlines and Bylines (1938). Edwards, of course, is best known as the host and creator of Truth or Consequences and This Is Your Life. The former was first heard on CBS on March 23, 1940, and ran through 1957 before transferring to television. Out of Truth or Consequences came the idea for This Is Your Life, which was first heard on NBC, for Philip Morris, on November 9, 1948, and spent two years on radio before coming to television in 1952.

81

82. Alice Faye (1915–) and Phil Harris (1904–). Alice Faye made her radio debut with Rudy Vallee in 1934 and that led to her extensive film career from 1934 through 1945, while Phil Harris had started broadcasting with Jack Benny in 1936. Faye and Harris were married on May 12, 1941, and beginning on September 29, 1946, starred together on The Fitch Bandwagon. In 1948, this program became The Phil Harris-Alice Faye Show and it continued on radio as NBC's answer to Amos 'n' Andy (heard the same time on Sunday evenings) through 1954. 83. Clifton Fadiman (1904–). A distinguished man of letters, Clifton Fadiman moderated the popular quiz Information Please from 1938 through 1948, and later hosted Conversation from 1954 through 1957. 84. Jinx Falkenburg (1919–). One-time cover girl, occasional film actress and Life magazine's number-one girl for 1941, Jinx Falkenburg, with her husband Tex McCrary, hosted the most popular breakfast show of the Forties, Hi, Jinx!, originating out of WEAJ-New York in 1946 and continuing well into the Fifties. Later the two were to be heard on NBC on an evening program, Tex and Jinx, describing themselves as "the first husband-and-wife breakfast team to stay on the air for dinner." During the 12 years that the McCrarys were on radio and television, they interviewed over 16,000 guests.

82

83

84

85

85. Jimmy Fidler (1900–). Fidler began his newspaper career in the early Twenties, after appearing in a few silent films. He made his radio debut in 1932, and quickly gained a reputation for the crisp and caustic comments he had to offer on Hollywood personalities and films. A typical introduction would be, "This is Jimmy Fidler from Hollywood, where they marry for better or worse, but not for long." His remarks got him into a lot of trouble with the studios and he was frequently regarded as persona non grata, but nonetheless his network radio programs continued through the early Fifties, and he still broadcasts today on several local stations. 86. Gracie Fields (1898–1979). The popular British music-hall and film star made her U.S. radio debut on Campbell's Hollywood Hotel on CBS on April 30, 1937, and Variety thought she sounded like Polly Moran with a voice. Nevertheless, Gracie Fields was back in 1942 with her own nightly five-minute program for NBC-Blue, sponsored by Pall Mall; in 1943 the show expanded to 15 minutes on the Mutual network, and by 1944 ran a full 30 minutes. In addition, Gracie Fields was a featured guest star on many other radio shows and during 1951 and 1952 she was heard on her own show, again for Mutual. Variety (October 20, 1943) had to admit, "The Lancashire singer-comedienne is a great entertainer, whose vitality and irresistible personality overcome her frankly inadequate voice." 87. Elsie Ferguson (1885–1961). A beautiful and adroit stage actress who also had a major film career from 1917 through 1922, Elsie Ferguson made her radio debut on Ward's Family Theatre, over the CBS network, on Sunday, May 13, 1934. She was heard in subsequent weeks on that program recreating some of her major stage roles. During 1935 and 1936, Elsie Ferguson could be heard on a 15-minute political program, The Crusaders, in which she addressed herself to the women of the nation on the evils of political dictatorship and the New Deal.

86

87

88

89

88. W. C. Fields (1880–1946). A major star of vaudeville, Ziegfeld Follies and films, W. C. Fields made his first radio appearance on a regular series on May 9, 1937, when his famous inflammatory confrontations with Charlie McCarthy began; they continued on a semi-regular basis from 1941 through 1944. In addition, Fields was a regular in 1938 on NBC's Your Hit Parade. 89. Ted Fio Rito (1900–1971). A famous composer-bandleader of the Twenties, Thirties and Forties, Ted Fio Rito composed many popular songs, including "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and gave work with his orchestra to many celebrities-to-be, some of whom were Betty Grable, Lucille Ball, June Haver and David Rose. Among the many radio programs on which Ted Fio Rito was featured are Presenting Al Jolson (NBC, 1932), Hollywood Hotel (CBS, 1934–1937) and The Jack Haley Show (NBC and CBS, 1937–1939).

90

90. Alice Frost (birth year unavailable). Alice Frost made her radio debut on WMCA in the mid-Thirties, after extensive stage work; she was the star of Big Sister (CBS, 1936–1942), Les Misérables (Mutual, 1937), Woman of Courage (CBS, 1940–1942) and, of course, Mr. and Mrs. North (NBC and CBS, 1942–1952). She worked with Orson Welles on the stage and in The Mercury Theatre on the Air, and also worked with Al Pearce, Stoopnagle and Budd, Jimmy Durante (in Jumbo), Robert Benchley and Robert Ripley, and was also to be heard on News Parade, The Clock and The Second Mrs. Burton. Miss Frost was described in 1939 as the Busiest Actress on Broadway, has worked extensively in television—she was Aunt Trina in Mama—and is still active today. She is seen in the photo with Joseph Curtin (as Mr. and Mrs. North). 91. Jane Froman (1908–1980). Today, Jane Froman is best remembered for her struggle back to stardom after a near-fatal plane crash in 1943, a struggle recorded in the 1952 film With a Song in My Heart, starring Susan Hayward. A strong personality with a rich contralto voice, Miss Froman came to fame on WENR-Chicago in 1931 after earlier broadcasts on WLS-Cincinnati. Among her many radio programs were The Intimate Revue (NBC-Blue, 1934–1935), The Gulf Oil Show (CBS, 1939) and The Pause That Refreshes (CBS, 1948). 92. Arlene Francis (1908–). A stage and screen actress who will always be remembered for the years she spent on television's What's My Line?, Arlene Francis was a busy actress and all-round personality on radio from the Thirties onward. Aside from brief periods on Betty and Bob (NBC) and The Hour of Charm (CBS), Miss Francis was a regular on What's My Name? (Mutual, NBC and ABC, 1938–1949), Blind Date (NBC, 1943–1945) and The Affairs of Ann Scotland (ABC, 1946–1947).

91

92

93

93. The Funnyboners. The Funnyboners were a comedy singing trio consisting of Gordon Graham (smiling in the photo) David Grant (with the microphone) and Bunny Coughlin, who would begin their act singing, "We are the funnyboners and we hope you won't disown us." Very popular on early radio, by 1932 the Funnyboners were to be heard three times a week on CBS. 94. Jan Garber (circa 1895–1977). A popular orchestra leader on radio in the Thirties and Forties, Jan Garber formed his first band at the age of 21 with pianist Milton Davis, together with whom he composed his theme song, "My Dear." Garber was noted for the sweet sound of his music, although he did try swing in the early Forties. 95. Ed Gardner (1901–1963). Ed Gardner had been a radio director (he worked for a while with Rudy Vallee) before creating the character of Archie of Duffy's Tavern, initially on a 1939 CBS program, This Is New York. Duffy's Tavern became a popular favorite on CBS in 1941 and was heard through 1951, later moving over to NBC. Ed Gardner's Archie was the master of the wrong word in the right place, while Gardner's real wife (from 1929 to 1942) Shirley Booth played Miss Duffy. 96. Betty Garde (1905–). Stage and screen actress Betty Garde, who made her professional debut in 1922 and is best known as Aunt Eller in the original production of Oklahoma!, was very active on radio from the Thirties through the Fifties. Among the programs on which Miss Garde was heard are Les Misérables (Mutual, 1937), Lorenzo Jones (NBC, 1937–1955), My Son and I (CBS, 1939–1940), Policewoman (ABC, 1946), The Fat Man (ABC, 1946–1951) and The Big Story (NBC, 1947–1955). She worked with Eddie Cantor, Kate Smith, Milton Berle and Goodman Ace, played every wanted woman on Gang Busters and was Madame X for Ex-Lax. 97. George Gershwin (1898–1937). The composer of some of the best popular music of the twentieth century (including Rhapsody in Blue and An American in Paris) and the scores for some of the century's best-known shows (Porgy and Bess; Lady, Be Good!; Funny Face and Girl Crazy) did not overlook radio. Gershwin had his own twice-weekly program, Music by Gershwin, on WJZ, sponsored by Feenamint, which was first heard on February 19, 1934. By 1935, the Gershwin program was heard only once a week.

94

95

96

97

98

98. Floyd Gibbons (1887–1939). A war correspondent turned radio commentator whose eyepatch—he had lost an eye during the First World War—gave him an air of drama and mystery, Floyd Gibbons was heard regularly between 1932 and 1936 under the sponsorship of Colgate-Palmolive, Armour, RCA and others. He was noted for his on-the-spot broadcasts and for his rapid-fire style of announcing. With Lowell Thomas, Gibbons had been responsible for Headline Hunters, one of NBC's earliest news broadcasts, first heard in 1929. 99. Arthur Godfrey (right) gives Herb Shriner some pointers on Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, which the latter was to emcee while Godfrey was on vacation during the summer of 1951. Arthur Godfrey (1903–1983). Arthur Godfrey has been described as "radio's one-man show," an entertainer who could entertain by simply chatting with his audience. Godfrey entered radio in 1930 with WFBR in Baltimore, and the same year joined NBC as an announcer. He moved to CBS in 1934, remaining with that network for almost 40 years, although he did find time to work elsewhere, such as Mutual with a 15-minute show for Barbasol during 1937 and 1938. It was in the Forties that Godfrey came to the fore in radio, noted for his criticism of the advertisers' products and for programs such as Victory Begins at Home (1942), produced to boost civilian morale, Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, beginning in 1942, Arthur Godfrey Time, beginning in 1945, and Arthur Godfrey's Digest, beginning in 1952. He presented his farewell radio show on April 30, 1972. Herb Shriner (1918–1970). Herb Shriner, the Hoosier Humorist, entered radio at the age of 17, and by 1942 was the star of The Camel Caravan. He had his own program, Herb Shri- ner Time, on CBS from 1948 through 1949, and in 1951 was a summer replacement for Arthur Godfrey on both radio and television. This stint led to an extensive career in the latter medium. 100. Bert Gordon (1895–1974). Bert Gordon was the Mad Russian of radio and films, noted for his dialect greeting of "How do you do?" He was a regular on Eddie Cantor's program from 1935 through 1949. 101. Benny Goodman (1909–1986). The King of Swing. Benny Goodman began his professional career as a clarinetist with Bix Beiderbecke. He formed his own dance band in 1934 and that same year was signed by NBC. Benny Goodman and radio were as synonymous as Benny Goodman and swing in the Thirties and Forties. 102. Richard Gordon (1882–?). Aside from Basil Rathbone, Richard Gordon was radio's Sherlock Holmes for the longest period of time, from 1931 through 1935 on NBC, under the sponsorship of George Washington Coffee. Gordon was also to be heard on many soap operas and other programs through the Forties, including The Bishop and the Gargoyle, Follow the Moon, Jane Arden, Orphans of Divorce, Pepper Young's Family, Stella Dallas and Valiant Lady. 103. Gale Gordon (1906–). Before he became Lucille Ball's best-known male sidekick, Gale Gordon had been active in radio from the early Thirties. Among the many programs on which he appeared are Big Town; The Shadow of Fu Manchu (from the Thirties); The Casebook of Gregory Hood; The Great Gildersleeve; Johnny Madero, Pier 23; Junior Miss and My Favorite Husband (from the Forties). He will always be remembered for his eight years with Fibber McGee and Molly as the Old Timer, etc., and as Gsgood Conklin on Our Miss Brooks.

99

100

101

102

103

53

104

104. Tito Guizar (1912–). With his pleasant tenor voice, bright smile and guitar, Tito Guizar was a welcome performer on radio from 1932 onward. In addition to radio, Guizar was featured in films and still remains active, now making his home in his native Mexico.

105

107

106

105. Ben Grauer (1908–1977). Benjamin Franklin Grauer joined NBC in 1930 and quickly became its senior commentator and reporter. He was announcer for Henry Morgan, Walter Winchell, Information Please (in the Forties) and the NBC Symphony Orchestra (1940–1954). Grauer covered every major historic event, including the Morro Castle Fire, the Paris Peace Conference and the U.S. occupation of Japan. Eleven times between 1951 and 1969, Grauer covered the New Year's Eve celebrations in Times Square for both radio and television. He provided the commentary for NBC's first television special, the opening of the New York World's Fair in 1939, and, with John Cameron Swayze, presented the first live television coverage of the national political conventions in 1948. Aside from his work as an announcer and commentator, Grauer found time to host such shows as Pot o' Gold (1939–1941).

106. Johnny Green (1908–). Johnny Green, who now calls himself John Green, is a major figure in American popular music, a noted composer, conductor and arranger who was extremely busy on radio in the Thirties, working with Ruth Etting, Jack Benny, Fred Astaire and others. Green later went to Hollywood, where he has won five Academy Awards and has been nominated for nine more.

107. Jack Haley (1899–1979). Jack Haley was already a star of vaudeville, musical comedy and films when he began his first radio series on NBC in 1937, following his appearances on the Maxwell House Show Boat earlier that same year. The comedian is best known (in radio) as the host of The Sealtest Village Store (NBC, 1942–1947).

A127-1

109

108. The Happiness Boys: Billy Jones (at left in photo; 1889–1940) and Ernie Hare (1883–1939). Billy Jones and Ernie Hare were radio's Happiness Boys, two of the medium's first stars, with their theme song, "We two boys without a care entertain you folks out there. That's our hap-hap-happiness!" After working in revue, Jones and Hare entered broadcasting in 1921 and got their tag name from their first sponsor on WEA, Happiness Candy Stores of New York. When the pair were sponsored by Interwoven Hosiery, they became known as the Interwoven Pair and were later the Flit Soldiers, under the sponsorship of Standard Oil. In 1933, the Happiness Boys had their own program on NBC-Blue and in 1936 they were featured on CBS. At the time of Hare's death, the Happiness Boys were to be heard on The Three Little Saxes on WMCA, and, after his partner's death, Jones continued on that program with Hare's daughter

110

Marilyn. Variety (March 15, 1939) described the Happiness Boys as "the first singing and patter act to achieve national radio fame." 109. Radie Harris (birth year unavailable). The popular film columnist Radie Harris, whose feature "Broadway Ballyhoo" appears regularly in The Hollywood Reporter, has had probably the longest career on radio of any of her ilk, including Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper. Miss Harris made her debut on WOR-New York in 1930 and has been broadcasting almost continually since. 110. Dick Haymes (1918–1980). Dick Haymes was a popular baritone of the Forties, a close rival to Frank Sinatra. Haymes first came to the forefront with Harry James and His Orchestra in 1939. Aside from frequent guest appearances, he was to be heard on Here's to Romance (CBS, 1943–1945), The Dick Haymes Show (NBC and CBS, 1944–1947) and I Fly Anything (ABC, 1950–1951).

111

112

111. Gabriel Heatter (circa 1891–1972). Gabriel Heatter was a Hearst newspaperman turned radio reporter and commentator, best remembered as the host and interviewer for We the People on CBS in the late Thirties and early Forties, and for his Second World War broadcasts, which he would open with the words, "Ah, yes, there's good news tonight." Heatter retired from network broadcasting in 1960, and his last broadcast, on a Miami station, was on May 23, 1965. 112. Horace Heidt (1901–1986). A showman as much as a musician, Horace Heidt first came to radio on WJZ in January of 1931. Among his early radio broadcasts were Ship of Joy and Answers for Dancers (both in 1932). Heidt's first major series was Anniversary Night, first heard on CBS on February 2, 1935, which ran through 1937. At that time, it was Horace Heidt and His Brigadiers, but in 1939 the band became Horace Heidt and His Musical Knights. Heidt's best known programs were Pot 'o Gold (NBC, 1939–1941) and Youth Opportunity Program (NBC and CBS, 1947–1953).

113

114

113. Jean Hersholt (1886–1956). Jean Hersholt, who had a long and distinguished career as a character actor in both silent and sound films, first played Dr. Christian in the 1936 film The Country Doctor. This feature led to a series of six films for RKO between 1939 and 1941 and the radio series, on CBS, from 1937 through 1953. In addition to his acting, Hersholt was prominent in film-industry and charitable activities and President of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences between 1947 and 1949. 114. Hildegarde (1906–). Hildegarde Sell of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, made her first major radio appearance on The Fleischmann Hour on July 30, 1936, singing “These Foolish Things Remind Me of You” and “Life Story of a Piano.” Within a couple of years she had become the incomparable Hildegarde, earning $150,000 a year, whose theme song “Darling, Je Vous Aime Beaucoup” will always be associated with her. Hildegarde was to be heard on Ninety Men and a Girl (CBS, 1939) and Beat the Band (NBC, 1943), among other shows. Life (November 1, 1943) described her as “An effective song salesman with a husk in her voice.”

115. The Hoosier Hotshots. The Hoosier Hotshots—Paul “Hezzie” Trietsch, Ken Trietsch, Frank Kettering and Otto “Gabe” Ward—were one of the favorite acts on NBC’s National Barn Dance from 1933 through 1946. In addition, the musical novelty act was also featured on The Uncle Ezra Show (1934–1939). Described as “radio’s highest-paid novelty musicians,” the Hoosier Hotshots continued to perform until Paul Trietsch’s death in 1980, although Gil Taylor had replaced Kettering in 1944. 116. Edna Wallace Hopper (1864–1959). Edna Wallace Hopper, who began her rise to prominence on the legitimate stage in the last century, was known as the eternal flapper because of her youthful looks (helped by three face lifts). This star of the original New York production of Florodora in 1900 became well known to radio listeners of the Thirties with her beauty talks, and was dubbed the female Floyd Gibbons of the air because she spoke so rapidly. 117. Bob Hope (1903–). After many years in vaudeville and musical comedy, Bob Hope first came to radio in 1935 with The Intimate Revue on NBC. It was followed, in 1938, by Hope’s long-running Pepsodent Show, which continued on NBC through 1950. Despite his years on radio, Hope will probably be best remembered in years to come for his films from the mid-Thirties onward, for his countless appearances on the Academy Award show and for his work in entertaining the troops from the Second World War through Vietnam.

115

117

118

118. Elsie Janis (1889–1956). A major star of vaudeville, musical comedy and revue—she made her stage debut in 1897—Elsie Janis had a fling at radio, rather as she had earlier tackled the motion-picture industry. Miss Janis was first heard on radio on The Eveready Hour in the Twenties, but she made her first major radio appearance subbing for Robert Ripley in January of 1932. In 1934 NBC hired her as the medium's first woman announcer; it was a short-lived engagement. 119. Hedda Hopper (1890–1966). An actress of considerable, though neglected, talent in films from the late Teens through the Sixties, Hedda Hopper dispensed Hollywood gossip on the radio from 1939 through 1951. Prior to her gossip career, she was heard on the 1939 NBC serial Brenthouse, and was also featured on This Is My Story (CBS, 1944–1945). 120. Ted Husing (1901–1962). Ralph Edwards once remarked, "Marconi invented radio but Ted Husing knew what to do with it." Husing began his broadcasting career in 1924 by winning an announcing competition; in 1929 he joined CBS and remained with the network for 30 years, becoming radio's best sportscaster. In addition to sports announcing, Husing handled other chores for CBS and was the first announcer for Burns and Allen and for The March of Time. Severe illness in 1954 marked the close of Husing's career, and in 1959 CBS announced it was not renewing his contract.

119

120

121

122

62

123

124

121. Leon Janney (1917–1980). The Saturday Evening Post (February 19, 1949) described Janney as “one of the most successful of the 2,000-odd free lance actors who earn their living exclusively from radio.” In a typical year, 1949, he could be heard as Charlie Chan’s number-one son on Mutual every Monday, as Captain Arthur Duncan in Backstage Wife on NBC Monday through Friday and as Jerry Feldman in Pepper Young’s Family, also on NBC Monday through Friday. Janney had a remarkable career which began when he was two and embraced stage, screen, radio and television. As late as 1960 he was to be heard on The Romance of Helen Trent on CBS. 122. Al Jolson (1886–1950). Al Jolson was one of this century’s greatest entertainers, equally at home on stage, screen and radio. He was first heard on the last in 1927, but only came into his own in the Thirties, starring in The Al Jolson Show (1932–1933), The Kraft Music Hall (1933–1934) and Shell Chateau (1935–1936), all on NBC, and in The Lifebuoy Program (1936–1939) on CBS. Up until the day of his death, Jolson was a welcome guest on the most popular radio programs of the time, and, in addition, starred in seven Lux Radio Theatre shows from Burlesque in 1936 through Jolson Sings Again in 1950. Jolson was last heard, broadcasting from Korea on CBS for Louella Parsons, on September 15, 1950; death prevented his guest appearance on the October 24, 1950, Bing Crosby

Show. 123. Spike Jones (1911–1965). Spike Jones, the musical satirist who became a national institution with his recordings of “Chloe,” “Cocktails for Two” and his first big hit, “Der Fuehrer’s Face,” was a popular guest star of Forties radio programs and had his own show on CBS from 1947 through 1949. As Jones once remarked of his raucous music, which featured everything from cowbells to dog barks, “We were too corny for sophisticated people and too sophisticated for corny people.” 124. Jim (1896–1988) and Marian (1897–1961) Jordan. Jim and Marian Jordan were Fibber McGee and Molly, the leading citizens of 79 Wistful Vista, Peoria, who, thanks to their radio audience, “gave Peoria its 28,000,000 population.” Marian Driscoll and Jim Jordan were married on August 21, 1918, and first came to radio in Chicago in 1924. Fibber McGee and Molly was first heard on the NBC-Blue Network on April 16, 1935, and continued a radio favorite through 1957. Of the first program, Variety (April 24, 1935) had written, “more a slipshod musical hour than a refreshing down-to-earth comedy serial,” but by 1944 the program was carried by 133 NBC stations and affiliates. To most radio listeners, Fibber McGee and Molly brings back memories of Molly’s put-down, “T’ain’t funny, McGee,” and McGee’s infamous, crowded closet.

125

125. H. V. Kaltenborn (1878–1965). Known as the dean of radio news commentators, Hans Von Kaltenborn graduated from The Brooklyn Daily Eagle to radio commentating in 1922, but it was not until 1929 that he joined CBS to become its chief news analyst through 1940, when he moved to NBC. As Robert Landry wrote in Variety (June 16, 1965), “He had a splendor of voice trained by decades on the lecture platform, and an authoritative editorial writing manner which the anxieties and confusions of the epoch greatly welcomed.” 126. Ish Kabibble (1908–). Ish Kabibble was, in reality, Merwyn A. Bogue, a trumpeter turned comedian with Kay Kyser. He wore his hair in what has come to be known as a Beatles cut and sang novelty songs such as “Don’t Drop a Slug in a Slot” and “Three Little Fishes” on Kay Kyser’s Kollege of Musical Knowledge. (See also Introduction figure.) 127. Danny Kaye (1913–1987). Vaudeville comic Danny Kaye was hailed as a star as a result of his appearance in the 1940 Broadway hit Lady in the Dark. In 1944, he commenced his feature-film career with Samuel Goldwyn and the following year began his own show on CBS. (He had appeared very occasionally on local radio in the Thirties.) On the stage, Kaye was regarded as much as a pantomime artist as a vocal comic, and Time (January 15, 1945) was pleased to note, “He proved he could be funny in the dark.”

126

127

128

129

130

128. William Keighley (1889–1984). The Broadway actor-turned-film-director (1932–1953) William Keighley was the eventual permanent choice to replace Cecil B. DeMille on The Lux Radio Theatre. He was first heard on the program as the permanent host on November 5, 1945, and remained with the series through 1954. 129. Dorothy Kirsten (1917–). A blonde lyric soprano, equally at home in opera and semiclassical music, Dorothy Kirsten made her operatic debut with the Chicago Civic Opera Company on November 9, 1940. Prior to that, she had begun her career as a radio singer on WINS-New York in 1938, and then had become a protégée of Grace Moore. On radio, Miss Kirsten is best remembered for Keepsakes (NBC-Blue, 1943–1944), The Kraft Music Hall (NBC, 1947–1949) and Light Up Time (NBC, 1949). 130. Kay Kyser (1906–1985). With his familiar greeting of “Evenin’, folks! How y’all?” Kay Kyser was a popular radio staple from the mid-Thirties onward, best known for Kay Kyser’s Kollege of Musical Knowledge, heard from 1938 through 1949. Harry Babbitt and Ginny Simms were the featured singers on the show and the theme song was “Thinking of You.” Kyser had organized his first orchestra while a student at the University of North Carolina in 1926; he retired in 1951. (See also Introduction figure.)

131

131. André Kostelanetz (1901–1980). André Kostelanetz was noted for his easy-to-take versions of the classics. Born in Russia, he came to the United States in 1922, and six years later joined CBS as an arranger and conductor. It is claimed that Kostelanetz was the first to mix classical and popular music on radio, which he did on June 1, 1932, on a program that included "Alabama Bound" and the third movement of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. A busy conductor on radio in the Thirties and Forties, in 1952 Kostelanetz became guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic, a position that he held until his death. 132. Arthur Lake (1905–1987) and Penny Singleton (1909–). Both Lake and Singleton were long-time film performers before commencing the Blondie series for Columbia, in which they played Dagwood Bumstead and Blondie, respectively. Twenty-eight Blondie films were produced between 1938 and 1950, and from 1939 through 1948 Lake and Singleton starred in the radio version of the comic strip on NBC. Penny Singleton was replaced on the radio show in 1949 by Patricia Van Cleve, and one year later embarked on her own radio show on NBC. Lake stayed with the Dagwood Bumstead character longer, playing the role also in a popular Fifties television series. 133. Frances Langford (1914–). Frances Langford made her radio debut on a Tampa station in 1932. It was Rudy Vallee who brought her to network radio, and she was a frequent guest singer on variety shows as well as a regular on The Bob Hope Show in the late Thirties. With Don Ameche, Miss Langford created the comedy routine of The Bickersons on The Charlie McCarthy Show, and the two took The Bickersons to NBC in 1946 and CBS in 1947. Later, Langford teamed with Lew Parker to perform as The Bickersons on CBS in 1951. Her extensive film career, which began in 1935, did not equal the stature of her radio work.

132

134. Jesse L. Lasky (1880–1958). Lasky was a pioneering Hollywood producer, who co-founded Paramount Pictures in the early Teens and remained active in the film industry until his death. The producer devised and introduced a 30-minute amateur talent contest which offered winners contracts with RKO and was first heard on CBS on Sunday, January 8, 1939; the only major personality to be discovered on Lasky's program was Gale Storm. When Cecil B. DeMille quit The Lux Radio Theatre, it was his wish that Lasky replace him, but that was not to be. 135. Pinky Lee (1916–). The lisping burlesque comic with the funny hat had been active on radio since the Thirties, featured on such programs as Carefree Carnival (NBC, mid-Thirties), Drene Time (NBC, late Forties) and Tonight at Hoagy's (CBS, mid-Forties). Pinky Lee is best remembered, of course, as the star of one of the most popular children's television shows of the Fifties. 136. Oscar Levant (1906–1972). Oscar Levant, a brilliant, witty and neurotic concert pianist and composer, was once described by Henry Morgan as "possibly the world's oldest living brat." Radio listeners enjoyed Levant on NBC's Information Please from 1938 through 1943, but Levant himself noted, "My appeal is to a select few and they are in danger of being arrested."

134

135

136

137

137. Beatrice Lillie (circa 1894–). Beatrice Lillie, a multi-talented singer, actress and comedienne, first seen on the stage in the mid-Teens, was much in demand as a guest star on radio variety shows in the Thirties and Forties; the parody of Oklahoma! with Fred Allen is fondly remembered. Beginning in January of 1935, Miss Lillie had her own program on NBC, sponsored by Borden, but the network was so concerned that its star might prove too sophisticated for American audiences that it went to the trouble of sending out a special news release, explaining: "Through her inimitable characterizations and laugh-provoking songs, with their special lyrics and intentionally off-pitch tones she will poke fun at silly vanities and practices." 138. Guy Lombardo (1902–1977). In 1927 Guy Lombardo changed the name of his orchestra to the Royal Canadians, and that same year he made his radio debut on WBBM-Chicago. Two years later, Lombardo began broadcasting over the CBS network, and on December 31, 1929, he inaugurated his New Year's Eve network radio show. It was indeed "the sweetest music this side of Heaven." 139. Art Linkletter (1912–). Art Linkletter began his radio career in 1933 as an announcer for KGB-San Diego, and by the mid-Forties was the medium's foremost master of ceremonies. From shows such as What's Doin' Ladies? (NBC, 1943–1945) he graduated to People Are Funny (NBC and CBS, 1943–1959). Linkletter's best-known radio program was House Party, which made its debut on CBS on January 15, 1945, and ran through October 13, 1967; a television version was first seen on September 1, 1952.

138

139

140

140. Nick Lucas (1897–1982). The gentle singing voice of Nick Lucas was first heard on radio in the Twenties when Lucas was working for Ted Fio Rito at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago. After recording “Tip Toe Thru the Tulips with Me” in 1929, Lucas’ popularity was assured, and he became a regular on radio in the Thirties, being placed under contract to CBS in 1934. 141. Vincent Lopez (1894–1975). With his theme song, “Nola,” and his introduction, “Lopez speaking,” Vincent

141

Lopez became a national figure on radio. Lopez was the first conductor to lead his orchestra live from WJZ in 1921 and the first bandleader to be heard by remote pickup on radio, while playing at New York’s Pennsylvania Grill in 1921. Calvin Coolidge supposedly told the conductor, “I like the way you introduce numbers. You just give the name of the song, then play it. Most announcers talk too much.” Vincent Lopez continued to be heard on radio through the Fifties and was also a regular on television.

142

142. Lum and Abner: Chester Lauck (1902–1980; left) and Norris Goff (1906–1978). Lauck was Lum Edwards and Goff was Abner Peabody in Lum and Abner, a comedy series best described as a white Amos 'n' Andy. Lauck and Goff were first heard on KTHA-Hot Springs, Arkansas, on April 26, 1931, and later that year came to the NBC network and remained on network radio through 1953. Lum and Abner were the proprietors of the Jot Em Down Store in Pine Ridge, Arkansas, and so popular was the program that in 1936 the township of Waters, Arkansas, changed its name to Pine Ridge. In addition to radio, the Lum and Abner characters were featured in half-a-dozen feature films and a couple of shorts. 143. Abe Lyman (1897–1957). The veteran bandleader and composer (“I Cried for You,” etc.) began his career in Chicago in 1916. Lyman began to be heard on KMTR in Los Angeles after many years as the resident orchestra leader at the Carthay Circle Theatre and the Roosevelt Hotel in that city. On network radio, Lyman could be heard on such programs as Waltz Time (NBC, 1933) and, in 1935, was voted twelfth in popularity among radio’s bandleaders.

143

144

144. Knox Manning (1904–1980). The career of this popular radio announcer, who began on KNW-Los Angeles in the early Thirties, came to a virtual end after the Second World War following a throat operation. He was president of the American Federation of Radio Artists, 1950–1952, and the first chairman of the American Federation of Radio and Television Artists in 1952. 145. Gordon MacRae (1921–1986). An appealing baritone who will always be associated with the film roles of Curly in Oklahoma! (1955) and Billy Bigelow in Carousel (1956), Gordon MacRae first came to radio with Horace Heidt in 1940. After two years with Heidt, MacRae branched out on his own. He had a 15-minute spot, Tuesdays and Thursdays, on NBC for Gulf Oil in 1947, and starred on Texaco Star Theatre (CBS, 1947, and ABC, 1948), but is best remembered for The Railroad Hour (NBC, 1949–1954). Life (July 5, 1949) described MacRae as “radio’s most versatile singer.”

145

146

147

148

146. Freddy Martin (1907–1983). A big name in big bands, Freddy Martin was the resident orchestra leader at Los Angeles' Cocoanut Grove for 25 years, beginning there on December 17, 1940. Describing his music as “upper middle of the road,” Martin had his own show on CBS in 1941, for Lady Esther, and also played for The Jack Carson Show, first heard on CBS in 1943. 147. Johnny Marvin (1897–1944). A popular radio singer of the Thirties—he had his own show on NBC for five years—Johnny Marvin was billed as the Lonesome Singer of the Air. This melodious, though untrained, tenor was also a composer, writing the songs for many of the Gene Autry westerns. 148. Groucho Marx (1890–1977). The best-known of the Marx Brothers, Groucho was also the best-equipped for a radio career and was a frequent guest star from the early Thirties. Marx had a number of series on radio, including The Circle (NBC, 1939), Blue Ribbon Town (CBS, 1943–1944) and, of course, You Bet Your Life, heard on all three networks at one time or another between 1947 and 1959.

149

149. Mary Margaret McBride (1899–1976). Newspaperwoman and magazine writer Mary Margaret McBride was the undisputed first lady of radio. Her talk show was first heard over the CBS network in 1937, moved to NBC in 1941 and finished up on ABC in 1950. She was noted for making her guests feel comfortable “by telling a story about them that’s funny or sweet.” Miss McBride made her radio debut on WOR-New York in 1934; she celebrated her tenth anniversary on the air with a party at Madison Square Garden, opened by Mrs. Roosevelt, and her fifteenth anniversary with a shindig at Yankee Stadium, attended by 50,000 and including a speech titled “Mary Margaret McBride I Love You” by Eva Le Gallienne. Mary Margaret McBride retired from network radio in 1954 to try her hand at television, but was still conducting a local radio show from her living room in the Catskills at the time of her death.

150

150. Don McNeill (1907–). Don McNeill hosted the longest-running morning program on radio, The Breakfast Club, heard for one hour, Mondays through Fridays, from 1933 through 1968. The program was a mixture of music, jokes—all totally unsophisticated—and what one magazine described as “well-planned spontaneity.” He is seen here with two former Earl Carroll girls. 151. Graham McNamee (1888–1942). After making his debut as a baritone at Aeolian Hall, New York, in 1920, Graham McNamee joined WEAJ in 1923. He was one of NBC’s best-loved reporters and announcers, remaining with the network until his death 19 years later.

151

152

152. Burgess Meredith (1908–). Burgess Meredith began his professional career as a member of Eva Le Gallienne's Student Repertory Group in the late Twenties; his first major stage success came in 1935 with Winterset, the film version of which marked Meredith's screen debut the following year. The actor's radio debut was as Red Adams (later Red Davis) in the soap opera of that name, first heard on the NBC-Blue network on October 2, 1932, and later to become (without Meredith) Pepper Young's Family. Meredith was a memorable Hamlet on CBS, July 9, 1937, with Grace George; other one-shot radio appearances include Birth of a Nation (CBS, 1940), People with Light Coming Out of Them (CBS, 1941) and The Theatre Guild on the Air presentations of Wings Over Europe (CBS, 1945) and The Taming of the Shrew (CBS, 1937). In addition, Meredith was master of ceremonies on The Pursuit of Happiness (CBS, 1939) and We the People (CBS, 1941). 153. Aimee Semple McPherson (1890–1944). The radio broadcasts of the evangelist and founder of the International Church of the Foursquare Gospel were, in every sense of the word, shows. Aimee would use modern slang and when she muffed a Bible quotation would wind up with "and so on" The evangelist always began her broadcasts with the words, "You thousands of people here, you in the orchestra, you in the first balcony, you in the second balcony, you crowds standing in the rear, you thousands listening in over the radio."

153

154

154. The Mills Brothers (left to right: Herbert, Harry, Donald). The Mills Brothers originally consisted of Herbert, Harry, Donald and John; when John died in 1936 he was replaced by John Mills, Sr., and when he retired in 1957 the group became a trio. The brothers were first heard on radio on WLW-Cincinnati in 1925, and by 1932 were regarded as some of the biggest moneymakers on radio, heard over the CBS network under the sponsorship of Procter & Gamble. Using their voices like musical instruments, the Mills Brothers were featured on such programs as Friday night's Elgin Watch Hour (1935), on which their theme song was "Time on My Hands." Harry died in 1982.

155

78

156

157

155. Vaughn Monroe (1911–1973). The crooning baritone and bandleader with his self-composed theme song, “Racing with the Moon,” was known as the Man with Muscles on His Tonsils. Vaughn Monroe was the Forties’ answer to Rudy Vallee and had his own program on CBS from 1946 through 1954. He is seen here with the Moon Maids. 156. Molasses and January: Pick Malone (1892–1962) and Pat Padgett (1903–). Blackface comedians Malone and Padgett were first heard on radio with the WOR Minstrels in 1929. They changed their billing to Molasses and January for the Maxwell House Show Boat, first heard on NBC on October 6, 1932, and then become Pick and Pat again on CBS. As Molasses and January they returned to radio in 1941 on Dr. Pepper Parade and in September of 1942 were to be heard, Mondays through Fridays, on NBC-Blue with a five-minute comedy news comment, on which they were billed as America’s Advisors on the Home Front. 157. Garry Moore (1915–). Garry Moore entered radio with WBAL-Baltimore in the mid-Thirties and later moved to the NBC network, working on Club Matinee (1939) and Beat the Band (1940), among others. Moore is best remembered for The Camel Caravan (CBS, 1943–1947), on which he made a perfect partner to Jimmy Durante. Take It or Leave It (NBC, 1947–1948) and Breakfast in Hollywood (ABC, 1948–1949) followed, and then came The Garry Moore Show (CBS, 1949–1950), which led to his own television series. 158. Agnes Moorehead (1906–1974). Agnes Moorehead probably spent more time on radio than she did on the stage and in films, with which she is usually associated. Miss Moorehead made her radio debut as a singer in St. Louis in 1923 and was featured in the Twenties series Seth Parker. Agnes Moorehead was Mrs. Heartburn on The Phil Baker Show in 1935 and Calamity Jane on CBS in 1946; among the other series in which she appeared are Les Misérables (Mutual, 1937), The Shadow (CBS, 1937–1939) and Bringing Up Father (NBC, 1941). The actress worked frequently with Orson Welles, particularly in The Mercury Theatre on the Air, and was the star of the first episode of The CBS Radio Mystery Theatre on January 6, 1947. The radio role which will always be associated with Agnes Moorehead is that of Mrs. Stevenson in Sorry, Wrong Number, first heard in the CBS series Suspense on May 25, 1947.

158

159

159. Carlton E. Morse (1901–). One of the unheard stars of radio, Carlton E. Morse scripted two of broadcasting's best-known series, I Love a Mystery (NBC, 1939–1944, and Mutual, 1949–1952) and One Man's Family (NBC, 1932–1959). It was Morse who said, "There is no medium that will ever attract the same kind of attention as radio—nothing will be as equal to the imagination." 160. Edward R. Murrow (1908–1965). Edward Roscoe Murrow joined CBS in 1935, becoming its European director two years later. He was chief of CBS's foreign staff during the Second World War, and later became the network's vice-president and director of public affairs (1945–1947). He ended his days with CBS as news analyst (1947–1961) and host of the popular television programs See It Now and Person to Person. 161. Henry Morgan (1915–). Known as the bad boy of radio because of his kidding of sponsors, Henry Morgan had entered radio as a page boy with WMCA-New York at the age of 17. He later became an announcer and by 1937 had his own 15-minute show, Here's Morgan, on WOR. The Henry Morgan Show made its debut on ABC in 1946 and its star was hailed by The New York Times (September 8, 1946) as "the newest and brightest wit to reach the networks in years." Radio's most original satirist, and the star with a reputation for antagonizing sponsors faster than any other comedian, saw his radio show end in 1950.

160

161

162

162. Conrad Nagel (1897–1970). A Broadway star from 1918 and a bland actor in films from 1919 through 1959, Conrad Nagel was heard fairly regularly on radio in the late Thirties and early Forties. He starred in The 76 Review (1938), a 30-minute West Coast program from KFI-Los Angeles, sponsored by Union Oil, similar in style to Passing Parade, and was also master of ceremonies for The Radio Reader's Digest (1942–1945). Very active in Actors Equity, Nagel was one of the founders of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and its president from 1932 to 1933. 163. Myrt and Marge. With its theme song of "Poor Butterfly," Myrt and Marge was first heard on CBS in 1931 and last heard in the late Forties. The series was created by vaudevillian Myrtle Vail (1888–1978) to star herself and her daughter Donna Damerell (1912–1941). When the latter died in childbirth, she was replaced by Helen Mack because, as this was a series about show people, the program had to go on. According to Variety, the series' most important claim to fame is that it was the first radio program to feature an obviously homosexual character, a costume designer named Clarence Tiffinguffer. 164. Ken Murray (at right in photo; 1903–). A popular vaudevillian, whose stage show Blackouts ran in Los Angeles for seven and a half years, Ken Murray came to radio in 1932 as a guest on The Fleischmann Hour. In 1933, he commenced his own radio show on CBS featuring Tony Labriola (with whom he is seen here), as Oswald, and Eve Arden. It was in many ways a foretaste of Murray's 1950–1953 CBS television series. In addition, Ken Murray made guest appearances on other shows and was master of ceremonies for the 1944 CBS quiz Which Is Which?

163

164

165. Donald Novis (1906–1966). English-born Donald Novis was one of radio's more popular tenors in the Twenties and Thirties, and also had a sizeable career in films and on the stage. He was a regular in the early days of Fibber McGee and Molly and, while playing in Billy Rose's Jumbo on Broadway, was also heard on the NBC radio series of the same title in 1935. Novis retired in 1963 after 11,000 performances in the Golden Horseshoe Cabaret at Disneyland. 166. Gertrude Niesen (1911–1975). Gertrude Niesen, whose career also embraced stage and films, was first heard on radio as an impersonator and singer, but she quickly cast aside the former talent and after three and a half years with Rudy Vallee, CBS dubbed her "the exotic personality of the air waves." Miss Niesen was the first guest star on Duffy's Tavern in 1940, and in 1949 was declared the Most All-Around Talented Personality in the Amusement Field. 167. John Nesbitt (1910–1960). John Nesbitt was one of radio's storytellers, providing fascinating tales on his Passing Parade, which was heard from the summer of 1936 through 1948, sometimes as part of another program, and was also a popular series of shorts for M-G-M. First heard as a local program on KHJ in Los Angeles, The Passing Parade transferred to New York, under the sponsorship of Duart Cosmetics, in 1937. 168. Ozzie (1907–1975) and Harriet (birth year unavailable) Nelson. Ozzie Nelson welcomed Harriet Hilliard as the new singer with his band in 1932, and three years later the two were married. Both were featured with Joe Penner (from the fall of 1933), Robert Ripley and Red Skelton (on The Raleigh Cigarette Program beginning October 7, 1941). On October 6, 1944 (the couple's ninth wedding anniversary) The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet Nelson began on CBS, and was to continue for the next 22 years on radio and television. The New York Times praised the series for the authentic manner in which it dealt with the relationships between parents and their sons. (See also Nos. 187 and 200.) 169. Olsen and Johnson: Ole Olsen (at right in photo; 1892–1963) and Chic Johnson (1891–1962). Vaudevillians Olsen and Johnson, who were to create the Broadway musical Hellzapoppin' in 1938, made their radio debut on The Fleischmann Hour in July of 1932, and became regulars on the program, with Rudy Vallee, throughout the Thirties.

165

167

166

168

169

83

170. Oscar (1927–). Thirteen and a half inches tall, weighing eight and a half pounds and made of gold-plated britannia, Oscar is the most sought-after award in the film industry. The Awards ceremonies of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were first broadcast over KNX-Los Angeles on April 3, 1930. It was not until March 15, 1945, that the entire ceremony was broadcast live, over the ABC network and the Armed Forces Radio Service. The radio broadcast was dropped and the ceremony telecast only beginning with the forty-first Awards on April 14, 1969. 171. Jack Paar (1918–). A controversial figure on television in the Fifties, who became a major celebrity as the host of NBC's Tonight Show from 1957 through 1961, Jack Paar had already been featured in a number of films prior to making his mark on radio with his own show, a summer replacement for Jack Benny, sponsored by Lucky Strike, and first heard on June 1, 1947. The New York Times (November 10, 1957) summed up Paar as "a remarkably sophisticated man, rather in the style of Will Rogers." 172. Lloyd Pantages (circa 1908–). Son of noted theatrical magnate Alexander Pantages, Lloyd Pantages was a Hollywood columnist for the Hearst newspapers, who was first heard locally in Los Angeles on KNX in the summer of 1937. His 15-minute Sunday show was first heard over the CBS network on October 17, 1937.

170

171

172

173

174

175

173. Parkyakarkus (1904–1958). Harry Einstein, who legally changed his name to Parkyakarkus in 1936, was noted for his Greek dialect humor, which he first introduced to radio on Eddie Cantor's show in March of 1933. He supported Al Jolson on The Lifebuoy Program in the late Thirties and then had his own show, Meet Me at Parky's, from 1945 through 1947. A film comedian in the late Thirties and early Forties, Parkyakarkus died tragically only moments after delivering a brilliantly witty routine at a Friar's Club Roast for Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz. 174. Bert Parks (1914–). Bert Parks, who became a national institution as the master of ceremonies of the Miss America Pageant from 1954 through 1979, became a CBS announcer in New York in 1933, working with Eddie Cantor, Xavier Cugat and others. He is best known as the master of ceremonies for Break the Bank (Mutual, ABC and NBC, 1945–1950) and Stop the Music (ABC, 1947–1952), on which he is seen in this photograph. 175. Louella Parsons (1881–1972). Louella Parsons, the Hollywood gossip columnist and veteran newspaperwoman, was first heard on radio in 1928, and by 1931 had her own program, a 15-minute, once-a-week commentary for Sunkist, on CBS. Miss Parsons' Hollywood Hotel program ran on CBS from 1934 and was followed in 1941 by Hollywood Premiere, also on CBS, which ran for 39 weeks. The Parsons formula of using Hollywood stars to donate their talents in return for free plugs of their latest works seemed perfect until the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Radio Artists stepped in to oppose appearances of their members without payment on programs such as hers. Between 1945 and 1951, Louella Parsons was heard on her own 15-minute gossip program every Sunday for Jergens Lotion on the ABC network.

176

176. Joe Penner (1904–1941). Joe Penner, one of radio's most popular comedians in the early to mid-Thirties, was born József Pinter in Hungary, and began his professional career as a magician's assistant in vaudeville. In 1933, he appeared on Rudy Vallee's program, and as a result of his instant success was made the star of The Baker's Broadcast, sponsored by Fleischmann's Yeast, which was first heard on CBS on October 8, 1933. The following year Penner was voted America's Outstanding Radio Comedian and his catchphrases "Wanna buy a duck?" and "Oh, you nasty man" are as well known today as when he first introduced them. Penner left The Baker's Broadcast in 1935 and after a year's absence from radio returned with his own show in 1936. The show ended in 1940, and while touring in the musical comedy Yokel Boy Penner died of a heart attack.

177

177. Jack Pearl (at left in photo; 1894–1982). Dialect comedian Jack Pearl came to radio from vaudeville and revue. With his stooge Cliff Hall (with whom he is seen here), Pearl was the comedy feature on The Lucky Strike Program, beginning September 8, 1932, and the following year had his own show for Royal Gelatine. Pearl was known for two characters, Peter Pfeiffer and Baron von Munchausen, and for the catchphrase, “Vas you dere, Sharlie?” Variety (January 9, 1934) wrote, “Pearl is the premier radio exponent of the question-and-answer school of comedy,” but by the late Thirties that school of comedy was passé. Pearl and Cliff Hall tried a comeback in the summer of 1948 with an NBC show, sponsored by the U.S. Treasury. 178. Jan Peerce (1904–). A superstar among tenors, Jan Peerce made his radio debut with the NBC Symphony Orchestra. He had his own 15-minute show on WEAJ in 1933, using “Vesti la giubba” as his signature tune, and Variety (December 5, 1933) described him as “an excellent radio tenor.” A frequent radio performer, often with the NBC Symphony Orchestra and Toscanini, Jan Peerce also had his own program, Great Moments in Music, for Celanese Corporation, which made its debut on CBS on January 7, 1942. 179. Harold Peary (1908–1985). After a number of years on the stage, Harold Peary made his radio debut with the Oakland Tribune Juveniles on January 21, 1923, on KZM-Oakland; in 1929 he signed a long-term contract with NBC in San Francisco. In the Thirties, Peary was featured on Blondie and Fibber McGee and Molly, and it was on the latter program that he introduced the character of Throckmorton P. Gildersleeve in 1937. In 1941, The Great Gildersleeve became a program in its own right on NBC, with Peary playing the pompous but good-natured main character, a part which he continued to play through 1950 when boredom made him quit the series and start on the short-lived Honest Harold for CBS.

178

179

180

181

180. Ben Pollack (1903–1971). After Pollack's tragic suicide, critic Leonard Feather rightly described him as a "fallen giant of jazz." After working as a drummer with the New Orleans Rhythm Kings from 1922 through 1924, Pollack left to form his own band. He became a fixture at New York's Park Central Hotel, giving Benny Goodman his first major job, and was a popular favorite on radio during the Thirties and Forties. 181. Jane Pickens (birth year unavailable). Jane Pickens, along with her sisters Patti and Helen, came to radio, on NBC, in 1931, and the girls remained together as a trio until 1936, when Jane went into the Ziegfeld Follies as a replacement for Gertrude Niesen. A melodic soprano, Jane Pickens was a featured soloist on radio, working with Ben Bernie and having her own show on NBC in 1948; as late as 1950, she was the star of NBC's The Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street. 182. Mary Pickford (1893–1979). America's sweetheart turned to radio after her film career was over and, in the late Thirties and early Forties, was to be heard on two programs, Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers and Parties at Pickfair. Later, Pickford's third husband, Buddy Rogers, tried his hand at broadcasting, minus his better half.

183

184

183. Basil Rathbone (1892–1967). The popular British stage and screen actor, who is best known for the 15 films in which he appeared as Sherlock Holmes between 1939 and 1946, also appeared as the radio Sherlock Holmes during the same period, first on NBC-Blue and later on Mutual. Rathbone was first heard as Holmes on Monday, October 2, 1939, in “The Case of the Sussex Vampire,” sponsored by Grove Bromo-Quinine. Two years later, Variety (October 8, 1941) commented, “One of radio’s most satisfying acts is that of Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes.” In addition, Rathbone was heard as Inspector Burke on the 1947 Scotland Yard series on Mutual. 184. Irene Rich (1891–). Irene Rich was a dignified and striking screen actress, in demand from the late Teens through the Forties and best known for the many features in which she played opposite Will Rogers. On radio, she was always sponsored from 1933 through 1944 by Welch’s Grape Juice, appearing in a variety of 15-minute dramatic series. In 1934, for example, Irene Rich portrayed Lady Margo Carstairs off to Australia to locate her supposedly dead husband, while in 1936 she was a lawyer. The program originated at the NBC Chicago studios, and on Irene Rich’s forty-second birthday, October 13, 1933, Welch’s hosted a party there which anyone was invited to attend. Variety (May 29, 1934) quite rightly noted, “As a radio personality she is probably without counterpart.” 185. Harry Richman (1895–1972). Harry Richman’s chief claim to fame, as far as radio is concerned, is that he introduced payola to broadcasting, when in the early Twenties he accepted money from publishers to sing their songs on WHN-New York. A song-and-dance man and also an accomplished composer (“Singing a Vagabond Song,” “Walkin’ My Baby Back Home,” etc.), Richman was a favorite on radio for many years.

185

186. Dick Powell (1904–1963). The New York Times (January 4, 1963) described Powell as “a phenomenon of show business,” an accomplished star of film musicals and drama, a director, head of his own production company—Four Star Television—and a radio performer. Powell’s many radio programs included Hollywood Hotel (CBS, 1934–1938), Your Hollywood Parade (NBC, 1937–1938), Campana Serenade (NBC, CBS, 1943), The Fitch Bandwagon (NBC, 1944), Rogue’s Gallery (Mutual, 1945) and Richard Diamond, Private Detective (NBC, ABC, 1949–1952). 187. Robert Ripley (1893–1949). Robert Ripley first introduced his Believe It or Not newspaper cartoons in 1918, and transferred the idea to radio, on NBC, in 1930. Ripley and Believe It or Not were heard almost continually from then onward either as a separate program or as part of a variety series, on NBC, CBS and Mutual. In 1939, Ripley had the distinction of having his show in New York sponsored by Royal Crown Cola, despite Royal Crown’s being unavailable in the city. He is seen here with Ozzie Nelson (See No. 168).

186

187

91

188

188. Roy Rogers (1912–). Fresh from his film triumphs at Republic Pictures as the King of the Cowboys, Roy Rogers came to radio with his own show on the Mutual network in November of 1944. With him on the show, which was later heard on NBC, were the Sons of the Pioneers (until 1948), Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage (post-1948) and, from the mid-Forties onward, Rogers' second wife, Dale Evans. The happy trails of The Roy Rogers Show came to an end in 1955. 189. Will Rogers (1879–1935). Will Rogers, the nation's philosopher-hero, used radio much as he had earlier used his vaudeville act and newspaper column, to comment on the vagaries of American life and society. Rogers' best-known program was The Gulf Show, which began on NBC in 1933, and was to be heard on CBS up to the time of the entertainer's tragic death.

190. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882–1945). The thirty-first president of the United States (1933–1945) was perhaps the first president to realize the potential of radio for promoting his government's policies. Through his "fireside chats," Roosevelt attempted to "sell" America the New Deal and his other major programs; all of the president's greatest speeches were on radio, from the first, on March 4, 1933, "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself," through the last, on March 1, 1945, "I am confident ... we can begin to build, under God, that better world." Eleanor Roosevelt was also a frequent broadcaster but, unlike the president, she had a sponsor. 191. Baby Rose Marie (1923–). Rose Marie Curley won a beauty contest at the age of three, the prize for which was a trip to Atlantic City, where she was invited to appear on station WPG. Rose Marie's first major radio appearance was on WJZ-New York in July of 1931 and Variety (July 28, 1931) had to admit, "No doubt about the child having talent and an exceptional voice and delivery." It was that adult voice which gained Rose Marie her own 15-minute show on the NBC-Blue Network the following year, on which she promoted Julius Grossman Shoes. At the age of 12, Rose Marie retired, but returned to show business in 1947 and has since been seen on television on The Dick Van Dyke Show (1961–1966) and The Hollywood Squares (1968 to date). She never seems to be inactive. 192. Lanny Ross (1906–). Lanny Ross, a delightful tenor with an engaging smile, was first heard on radio on December 24, 1928, and was soon known to listeners as the Troubadour of the Moon. Ross became an instantaneous success as a result of his appearances on the Maxwell House Show Boat (NBC, 1932–1937). The singer remained a radio favorite through the Fifties, starring in such shows as The Packard Hour (CBS, 1937), and, in addition, had a successful Hollywood career, starring in Melody in Spring and College Rhythm (both 1934). He is also a composer of note.

190

94

191

192

193

193. S. L. Rothafel (1882–1936). Samuel Lionel Rothafel, better known as “Roxy,” was one of the great theatrical showmen of his day. He transformed his key New York theaters, the Capitol, the Strand, the Roxy and Radio City Music Hall, into national showcases. His broadcasting career began in 1923 when he was heard on The Capitol Family Hour, broadcast from the stage of the Capitol Theatre. He used the broadcasts, which featured the theater’s stage show, to promote audience attendance there. From 1927 through 1931, Roxy presented Roxy and His Gang on the NBC-Blue network. 194. Dave Rubinoff (1896–1986). Billed as simply Rubinoff and, aside from Jack Benny, radio’s best-known violinist, Dave Rubinoff began his professional career in 1912. He made his radio debut in 1931 with Eddie Cantor, with whom he remained for a number of years. A serious illness forced him off the air, but Rubinoff returned to the NBC-Blue network in the summer of 1943, after a five-year absence, with a program entitled, appropriately enough, Rubinoff Returns. 195. Harry Rose (circa 1892–1962). A burlesque comedian who began his career in 1910, Harry Rose was a somewhat effeminate master of ceremonies in vaudeville and on radio, rather similar in manner to the young Jack Benny. He was also noted for his appearances on television’s Colgate Comedy Hour.

194

195

196

197

196. Dinah Shore (1921–). Dinah Shore's infectious air of enjoying her work quickly made her as much a favorite on radio as she has been for the past 30 years on television. The entertainer was featured in the late Thirties and early Forties with Ben Bernie and Eddie Cantor, and as early as August 23, 1939, Variety wrote, "Dinah Shore ranks with the best vocalists broadcasting has to offer." In 1940, she was voted top new star in a Scripps-Howard National Radio Poll, and after her appearances with Eddie Cantor began her own show, Sunday, November 2, 1941, on NBC for Bristol-Myers. In 1943, Miss Shore was announced as a definite summer replacement for Edgar Bergen on The Chase and Sanborn Show, and she continued with her own show through the rest of the decade. 197. Julia Sanderson (1887–1975). The relaxed style of singer Julia Sanderson and of her husband, tenor Frank Crumit (1889–1943), made them naturals for vaudeville, musical comedy and radio. The couple made their radio debut in 1928, and the following year starred in Blackstone Plantation on NBC. In 1938, the two hosted The Battle of the Sexes on NBC and continued in the quiz format with The Crumit and Sanderson Quiz on CBS in 1942. After her husband's death, Julia Sanderson hosted Let's Be Charming (Mutual, 1943–1944). 198. Nathaniel Shilkret (1895–1982). Composer and conductor Nathaniel Shilkret was playing the clarinet in a symphony orchestra at the age of 13. He composed such popular songs as "Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time," "The First Time I Saw You" and "April Showers Bring May Flowers," together with many serious works; was music director of the Victor Talking Machine Company; and, from 1935, was active in Hollywood. Shilkret's orchestra was heard from 1927, over NBC, on The Eveready Hour; and of his daily 15-minute Music That Satisfies program in 1932, Variety (January 12, 1932) commented, "His melodic interpretations on these broadcasts are up to his best."

198

199

199. Frank Sinatra (1915–). Frank Sinatra's career began on radio, when, in 1937, he appeared as a member of the Hoboken Four on the Major Bowes Amateur Hour. During the Forties, Sinatra was heavily in demand as a guest star, particularly with Bob Hope, and also had a number of series of his own, including Songs by Sinatra (CBS, 1943), The Frank Sinatra Show (CBS, 1944–1947) and Light Up Time (NBC, 1949). 200. Red Skelton (1913–). The man who described radio as "television with a broken picture tube" began his radio career with Rudy Vallee in 1937 after many years in vaudeville. Red Skelton began his own radio show, on which he introduced his famous phrase "I dood it again," on NBC in 1941, and the show continued with breaks, and a switch for a number of years to CBS, until 1953. The Red Skelton Show was a popular favorite on television from 1951 through 1971. Skelton is shown here with Harriet Nelson (see No. 168).

200

201

201. Kate Smith (1909–1986). A giant of radio, both physically and artistically, Kate Smith came to the medium in 1931, after a number of years on the stage and after Columbia Records representative Ted Collins had taken her under his wing. For that first broadcast, on May 1, Kate Smith adopted what was to become her signature tune, “When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain.” Soon her opening and closing greetings, “Hello, everybody!” and “Thanks for listenin’,” had become the best known on CBS. She was heard almost continually on that network, under the sponsorship of A & P, General Foods, Grape Nuts, Sanka and others, through 1949, when she signed with ABC for one year. Later she was heard on Mutual, and, of course, was a frequent performer on television until her retirement in 1979. Of the singer who introduced—on November 11, 1938—“God Bless America,” President Roosevelt once said, “This is Kate Smith. And Kate Smith is America.” 202. Ann Sothorn (1909–). An attractive comedienne and singer in Hollywood films of the Thirties and Forties, Ann Sothorn came to radio in the summer of 1945 with a series based on her popular Maisie films, produced by M-G-M. The radio program ran concurrently with the production of the films and was a foretaste of the delight

Miss Sothorn was to be on television in Private Secretary and The Ann Sothorn Show. 203. Whispering Jack Smith (1898–1950). Jack Smith, the Whispering Baritone, began his professional career singing with a vaudeville quartet in 1915; in 1918 he joined the Irving Berlin Music Company as a song plugger. Smith became popular on radio in the late Twenties and at the same time became a Victor recording star. In the Thirties, Smith was to be heard on a 15-minute program on WABC, sponsored by Ironized Yeast. Variety (August 4, 1931) commented, “He has ether personality and a masculine virility decidedly different from that of the average pop singer.” After a hiatus in the late Thirties, Whispering Jack Smith was back on radio in 1941 with an early morning show, three times a week, on WEA-F-New York. 204. Phil Spitalny (1890–1970). Phil Spitalny organized his first all-girl, 22-member, orchestra in 1933 after many years with an all-male group. Spitalny and the orchestra were the stars of the long-running The Hour of Charm, heard sometimes on CBS and sometimes on NBC from 1935 through 1948. Spitalny married Evelyn Kaye, known professionally as “Evelyn and Her Magic Violin.” (Peggy Ryan is also seen in this still from the 1945 Universal film Here Come the Co-Eds.)

202

203

204

205

205. Arnold Stang (1923–). A diminutive comedian, noted for his eyeglasses and bow ties, Arnold Stang was an integral part of radio from the late Thirties through the mid-Fifties, best known as a regular on The Milton Berle Show (NBC, 1947) and The Henry Morgan Show (NBC, 1949–1950). 206. Jo Stafford (1920–). After leaving Tommy Dorsey's band, with which she made her name, Jo Stafford became, in 1943, the most popular female vocalist in America. She co-starred with Perry Como on Chesterfield Supper Club, from NBC, in the mid-Forties, had two sponsored shows on CBS, and was also a regular broadcaster for Voice of America and Radio Luxembourg.

206

207

208

209

207. Ezra Stone (1918–). Ezra Stone first portrayed Henry Aldrich on Broadway in What a Life in 1938, and a year later Stone brought the character to radio, on the NBC-Blue network for Jello, and continued to portray Henry Aldrich (except for the war years) until 1953. It has now been almost 30 years since “Hen-ree! Henry Aldrich” and “Coming, mother!” have been heard on radio and in the intervening years Ezra Stone has become a director and actor on television. 208. Bill Stern (1907–1971). Bill Stern began his radio career as a sports announcer in the mid-Thirties, becoming a regular on NBC with The Bill Stern Sports Review in 1937. Between 1939 and 1951, he hosted Colgate Sports Newsreel, with its famous theme, “Bill Stern the Colgate shave cream man is on the air; Bill Stern the Colgate shave cream man with stories rare.” 209. Stoopnagle and Budd: F. Chase Taylor (at right in photo; 1897–1950) and Wilbur “Budd” Hulick (1905–). F. Chase Taylor was Colonel Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle while Wilbur Hulick was Budd (presumably a pun on the then-popular chocolate Wilbur Buds). The two met on station WMAK-Buffalo in 1929; Hulick was an announcer there and Taylor a writer. When the station’s link to the CBS network broke down one day, the two went on the air and spoke anything that came into their heads. The result was they were asked to join CBS in New York and given their own program in 1931, Gloom Chasers. Stoopnagle and Budd moved to NBC-Blue in 1935 and split up in 1938. In a preface to Stoopnagle’s 1944 book, You Wouldn’t Know Me from Adam, Fred Allen had this to say of the Colonel’s comedy: “Life to him is the tilt of the cuckoo’s wing. Today the Colonel is known to his millions of fans as the titan of trivia. ... He has been chosen pinup boy in many of the country’s leading psychopathic wards.” Stoopnagle was first heard without Budd on the Paul Whiteman program on February 18, 1938; he was later heard on Quixie Doodle on Mutual, while Budd was to be heard on Music and Manners and What’s My Name?, also on Mutual. There is no information as to Budd’s present whereabouts or even if he is still living.

210

210. Ed Sullivan (1902–1974). A New York Graphic and later New York Daily News columnist, Ed Sullivan was first heard with an interview show on CBS in 1932, and continued on radio through the Forties. His program, The Toast of the Town, received its premiere on CBS television on June 20, 1948, became The Ed Sullivan Show in September of 1955 and left the air in 1971. Sullivan's success on both radio and television was due entirely to his guests, for, as Fred Allen once said, "He will last as long as someone else has talent." 211. John Charles Thomas (1889–1960). John Charles Thomas, famed baritone of opera, concert platform and radio, made his professional debut in 1912, and soon gained immense popularity, particularly with women, thanks to his rich, powerful voice and his fine features and athletic build. The singer made his radio debut on WJZ in August of 1931; he was a regular on many programs, including The Ford Sunday Evening Hour (CBS, 1936–1937) and The Pause That Refreshes (CBS, 1940–1941). Between 1943 and 1946, Thomas had his own 30-minute Sunday program for Westinghouse on NBC. 212. Gladys Swarthout (1904–1969). A good-looking and temperament-free opera star, Gladys Swarthout made her debut at the Metropolitan in 1929. She helped to popularize opera on radio in the Thirties and Forties, being featured regularly on such programs as The Palmolive Beauty Box Theatre (NBC, 1934) and The Prudential Family Hour (CBS, 1941–1944). Miss Swarthout retired in 1956.

211

213

214

215

213. Lowell Thomas (1892–1981). A distinguished writer, producer and commentator, Lowell Thomas began his radio career in 1930 and remained an integral part of the medium all his life. As early as February 25, 1931, Variety described the secret of Thomas' success: "Lowell Thomas goes after the lightness of touch. He seeks and develops the bizarre in news and stresses the human happenings instead of merely following the maxim that names make news." Thomas (at the right) is seen here with William S. Paley, chairman of the board of CBS, on the occasion of Thomas's twentieth anniversary in radio. 214. Lawrence Tibbett (1896–1960). Tibbett, a principal with the Metropolitan Opera Company from 1925 to 1950, was noted for using his rich baritone voice to sing down to the masses on radio. He was a frequent guest star on radio shows of the Thirties and Forties, as well as a regular on such programs as The Packard Show (CBS, 1935). Tibbett is seen here between conductor William Daly (at left) and announcer Alois Havrilla (at right). 215. Mel Tormé (1925–). A popular entertainer in nightclubs, on television

216 and on records, in addition to being a composer of note, Mel Tormé is best known on radio for his own NBC show in 1948, although earlier he had worked as a child actor in Chicago in such shows as Little Orphan Annie, Lights Out, It Can Be Done, The Romance of Helen Trent and Mary Noble, Backstage Wife. 216. Arthur Tracy (1903–). Tracy came to fame on CBS in 1931 billed simply as the Street Singer, a baritone whose identity was a closely guarded secret. The secrecy aided Tracy's career immensely and soon thousands of listeners were writing in as to his identity. After five months, Tracy was revealed and around the same time he adopted "Marta" as his theme song. Tracy continued to star on radio on his own 15-minute shows, broadcasting from WOR in New York, until 1935 when he left for England and a lengthy film and vaudeville career there. He was back in New York in 1940, again on WOR and again with a 15-minute show, sponsored by FYR'PRO. In 1942, Tracy moved to NBC, accompanying himself on the accordion, on a 15-minute program for Ex-Lax.

217

218

219

217. Arturo Toscanini (1867–1957). Regarded as one of this century's greatest conductors, Toscanini became conductor of the NBC Symphony Orchestra in 1937, after serving in a similar capacity with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra from 1926, and remained with the orchestra until he retired in 1954. Variety (October 27, 1948) described the orchestra as "NBC's pride and joy and $800,000 a year contribution to public service programming." 218. Lurene Tuttle (1906–1986). It was little wonder that Lurene Tuttle was another entertainer chosen to be dubbed First Lady of Radio, for she was one of broadcasting's busiest actresses in the Forties and Fifties. In the Forties, she could be heard on The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet (as Harriet's mother), Box 13, Stars over Hollywood, The Adventures of Sam Spade (as Effie), A Date with Judy (as Gloria), The Great Gildersleeve, The Unexpected, The Lux Radio Theatre, The Red Skelton Show and Maisie, while in the Fifties, she was heard on The CBS Radio Workshop and Nightbeat, and seen on television, for six years, with Red Skelton. 219. Vera Vague (1908–1974). Barbara Jo Allen created the character of Vera Vague, a woman who tries to do everything a man can do and gets stalled in the process, on The Pepsodent Show. Miss Allen had previously appeared, as Beth Holly, on One Man's Family in the Thirties. Vera Vague remained on The Pepsodent Show with Bob Hope until 1949 when she joined Jimmy Durante. Aside from her radio work, Vera Vague was featured in more than 30 films.

220. James Wallington (1907–1972). James Wallington made his radio debut on WGY-Schenectady in 1924; he joined NBC in 1930 and became one of its top announcers, best remembered for introducing Roosevelt’s fireside chats. In 1966, Wallington joined Voice of America and remained with that organization almost until his death. 221. Harry Von Zell (left) and Don Wilson. Harry Von Zell (1906–1981). Harry Von Zell probably had the greatest following enjoyed by any announcer thanks, largely, to the many years he spent on radio and television with Burns and Allen. He obtained a firm foothold on radio in 1929 when he became announcer for Paul Whiteman, and was later to be heard on shows with Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, Phil Baker, Stoopnagle and Budd, and Dinah Shore, among others. Late in his life, Harry Von Zell was well known to California television viewers as the spokesman for Home Savings and Loan. Don Wilson (1900–1982). Don Wilson began his career with KFEL-Denver in 1923 as a singer, later moving, in 1929, to KFI-Los Angeles as an announcer. He resigned from NBC in 1934 to join Jack Benny and remained with the comedian for the next 33 years. (“I guess I laughed in the right places,” he suggested once as the reason for his longevity with Benny.) In addition to working with Jack Benny, Don Wilson could also be heard on such programs as Glamor Manor (ABC, 1944–1947). (See also Introduction figure.)

220

108

221

222

222. Rudy Vallee (1901–1986). Not only was Rudy Vallee one of radio's greatest stars, he was also one of its greatest starmakers. When Vallee came to network radio, on NBC, in 1929, his greeting of "Heigh-ho, everybody!" was already familiar to New York nightclubgoers. The Rudy Vallee program, known back then as The Fleischmann Hour, provided 60 minutes of unique Vallee talk, jokes and music, and also introduced a gallery of well-known names to broadcasting, including Eddie Cantor, Noel Coward, Beatrice Lillie, Alice Faye, Edgar Bergen and Red Skelton. In 1940, Rudy Vallee introduced John Barrymore as a regular on his program, and the great actor remained with Vallee through 1942. When Vallee joined the U.S. Coast Guard in 1943, his show went off the air, but returned in 1944, and as late as the Sixties, Rudy Vallee was still to be heard on local radio.

223

223. Orson Welles (1915–1985). The man responsible for two of the greatest classics of the cinema, Citizen Kane and The Magnificent Ambersons, learned his craft on radio in the Thirties on such programs as The Cavalcade of America (NBC), The Columbia Workshop (CBS) and The March of Time (NBC). Les Misérables (Mutual, 1937) and The Shadow (CBS, 1937–1938) followed, and then came The Mercury Theatre on the Air (CBS, 1938–1940) with its infamous The War of the Worlds broadcast. Other Orson Welles programs include Orson Welles Theatre (CBS, 1941–1943), Ceiling Unlimited (CBS, 1942–1944) and This Is My Best (CBS, 1944–1945).

224

224. Fred Waring (1900–1984). One of the best-known orchestras on radio from 1933 onward, Fred Waring's band was described by Variety (December 4, 1935) as "one of the most imitated on the ether. ... More concert than anything else, with pop tunes for the adolescents and choral arrangements for the rocking chair crowd." Waring started on CBS, where he adopted his signature tune, "Breezin' Along with the Breeze." He moved to NBC in the late Thirties, on which network his best-known programs were Chesterfield Time (1939–1944) and The Fred Waring Show (1945–1950). Today, Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians are still a popular featured attraction, despite Waring's no longer being able to lead the aggregation. 225. Jack Webb (1920–1982). Many of the television series and films with which Jack Webb is closely associated had their origins in earlier radio programs featuring the actor-writer-producer. Webb could be heard on One Out of Seven (ABC, 1946), Johnny Madero, Pier 23 (Mutual, 1947), Jeff Regan, Investigator (CBS, 1948–1949), Drag-net (NBC, 1949–1956) and Pete Kelly's Blues (NBC, 1951).

225

226

226. Ted Weems (1901–1963). Leader of one of the popular bands on radio in the Thirties and Forties, Ted Weems was noted for whistling a song and then inviting the audience to whistle along. His style of music was similar to that of Lawrence Welk, which made it perfect for the NBC musical quiz Beat the Band, heard from 1941 through 1943. 227. Paul Whiteman (1890–1967). One of the best-known orchestra leaders of the twentieth century, Paul Whiteman became a national figure after his 1924 initial presentation of George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. Whiteman was very active on radio, being the first star of The Kraft Music Hall on NBC in 1933 and hosting such programs as Paul Whiteman Presents (NBC, 1943) and The Radio Hall of Fame (NBC-Blue, 1943–1945). In 1947, he became a disc jockey on ABC with his own Monday-through-Friday program.

227

228

228. Marie Wilson (1916–1972). Marie Wilson first became the world's stereotypical dumb blonde in Ken Murray's Blackouts, a Hollywood revue from 1942 through 1949, in which Miss Wilson never missed a performance. She brought her dumb-blonde characterization to radio with My Friend Irma, which was to be heard on CBS from 1947 through 1954. 229. Meredith Willson (1902–1984). Before he wrote The Music Man and following his years as a flutist with the New York Philharmonic,

229

Meredith Willson was providing the music for many popular radio programs, including Carefree Carnival (NBC, 1933–1935), Good News (NBC, 1937–1940), Coffee Time (NBC, early Forties) and The Big Show (NBC, 1950). For the last, Willson composed "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You" for Tallulah Bankhead to sing at the show's close, and always acknowledged Miss Bankhead's introduction with "Thank you, Miss Bankhead, sir."

230

231

230. Walter Winchell (1897–1972). From a child vaudeville performer with Gus Edwards and a prominent newspaper columnist, Walter Winchell graduated to radio performer in July of 1930 with his own 15-minute program on WABC. Walter Winchell's Journal was first heard on the NBC-Blue network in 1932 and ended its days on ABC in 1955. Winchell would always commence his program with a shouted greeting to "Mr. and Mrs. North America and all ships at sea." On June 28, 1937, Winchell starred in The Lux Radio Theatre production of The Front Page. "Poor Walter," Dorothy Parker once remarked. "He's afraid he'll wake up some day and discover he's not Walter Winchell." 231. Charles Winninger (1884–1969). Charles Winninger had played Captain Andy in the original 1927 New York production of Show Boat—and was to essay the role in the 1936 film version—so it was not unnatural that Winninger play Captain Henry on the Maxwell House Show Boat on NBC from 1932 through 1934 and again in 1937. 232. Tony Wons (1891–1965). Tony Wons was radio's poet-philosopher of the Thirties, reading sentimental verse and dispensing homilies on Tony Wons Scrapbook (first heard on CBS in 1930) and The House by the Side of the Road, accompanied by Ann Leaf at the organ. His perennial greeting was "Are yuh listenin'?" Wons retired in 1943.

232

233

233. Alan Young (1919–). Born in Great Britain and raised in Canada, Alan Young made his screen debut in 1946 and around the same time embarked on a career in radio. He was heard on The Jimmy Durante Show (CBS, 1948) and on The Texaco Star Theatre (CBS, 1947, and ABC, 1948) before commencing his own program, for Tums, on January 11, 1949. Probably Young's biggest success to date has been on television in the Mr. Ed series on CBS from 1961 to 1965. 234. Robert Young (1907–). In films since 1931, Robert Young entered radio in the mid-Thirties, and among the series on which he was heard are Good News of 1939 (NBC, 1939) and Passport for Adams

234

(CBS, 1943). Of course, Young is best known for Father Knows Best, first heard on NBC on Thursday, August 25, 1949, under the sponsorship of General Foods, and a popular radio program through 1954. 235. Ed Wynn (1886–1966). Ed Wynn was a vaudeville and revue comic who evolved into a fine screen character actor, and along the way was heard frequently on radio, beginning with a WJZ broadcast in 1922 of his stage hit The Perfect Fool. Wynn is best known for the title role of The Fire Chief, the Texaco-sponsored program that began on April 26, 1932, but he was later heard as The Perfect Fool and on Happy Island.

Great Radio Personalities

in historic photographs

by Anthony Slide

Before television, even before the talking film, there was radio. The first commercial programming hit the airwaves in 1922. By 1931, reviews of countless star-studded broadcasts regularly appeared beside those of movies and Broadway plays: the golden age of radio had begun. Yet, some twenty years later, after the advent of television, the wit, the drama, the exciting live broadcasts of great music and sparkling repartee—all had vanished.

Now Anthony Slide, distinguished historian of American entertainment, has assembled 239 stunning photographs that bring back to life the all-too-brief golden era of radio broadcasting. This gallery of familiar and unfamiliar faces—portraying nearly every important radio personality—is complemented by full biographical captions that recall the colorful history of live broadcasting and are as full of surprises as the old programs themselves.

You will discover or recall with nostalgia the familiar greetings once available at the flick of a dial: Rudy Vallee's "Heigh-ho, everybody!" or perhaps Walter Winchell's electrifying appeal to "Mr. and Mrs. North America and all ships at sea." Here also are the famous tags, amusing catchphrases by which many otherwise forgotten personalities are still remembered, among them Ben Bernie's "Yowsah, yowsah, yowsah" and Joe Penner's "wanna buy a duck?" You will also find many colorful performers that few remember today, like the Clicquot Club Eskimos, Whispering Jack Smith, Stoopnagle and Budd, Parkyakarkus and Ish Kabibble. But most of all, you will find the great talents who have not been forgotten.

In its prime, radio broadcasting offered riveting dramatic performances that rivaled those on stage and screen, displays of comic genius as hilarious as anything in vaudeville, outstanding live concerts, and a ceaseless stream of stirring reportage and fascinating conversation. Most of the immortal personalities who made all this possible are portrayed here, together with notes on their broadcasting successes. Among the profusion of great comedians, vocalists, announcers, newscasters and multi-talented personalities who defy categorization are Burns and Allen, Al Jolson, Edward R. Murrow, Orson Welles, Fibber McGee and Molly, Edgar Bergen, the Andrews Sisters, Arthur Godfrey, Arturo Toscanini, Fred Allen, Cab Calloway, Gertrude Berg—even President Franklin D. Roosevelt—and dozens more, as well as many now-faded figures who will pique the memory of radio buffs.

The last of the great broadcasts are gone. But now, with this outstanding collection, you can preserve the immortal moments and the faces that match the unforgettable voices of this unique episode in the history of American entertainment.

RM# 0620000

World Radio History

