The NRC Night Pattern Book - Fourth Edition

The National Radio Club Night Pattern Book

The first three Night Pattern Books consisted of hand drawn maps using an 8½ by 14 inch format. These were produced when home computers were in their infancy. NRC'ers Jerry Starr and Wes Boyd did the bulk of the work developing this DX aid.

This map book is the product of modern PC's and a Computer Aided Design (CAD) program. This edition has been long in the making due to the extreme amounts of time needed to painstakingly draw each pattern. The best thing is that this book will lend itself to easy updating as the years go by.

The idea for the production of this edition was the brain child of NRC'er Fred Tankersley. One of the silent majority within the NRC, Fred started converting the last edition of the pattern book into CAD drawings. He worked at it until he had converted everything that the club could get. After a year of writing stations and gathering data from many sources, patterns had been gathered for the rest of the United States, Canada and Mexico.

At this point Bill Hale, already known for his editing of the Station Location Map Book volunteered to put the great many patterns for the new stations on the maps. The maps were completed in the fall of 1995.

In order to keep everything in synch Wayne Heinen, the Chief Editor of the AM Radio Log, began the task of producing a numbered index from the Log and rectifying the maps with the patterns. Some patterns had to be added and some deleted, to match the 16th edition of the AM Radio Log. With the indexes complete, it was time to place the numbers on the maps, all 3,931 of them! Joan Heinen volunteered to add the index numbers, what turned into a three week task.

Since none of the above mentioned volunteers ever make mistakes, we enlisted the aid of Jerry Starr, NRC's AM Switch Editor. Jerry's job was to review all the maps for the proper placement of the index numbers and the approximate locations on the maps.

The book was assembled as you see it here, then a proof copy went to Paul Swearingen, knowing that a school teacher can spot misspelled words, as well as misplaced cities, Paul gave the final check off before sending the masters to the printer.

This book follows the format of the original Night Pattern Book. You'll find the "graveyard" channels absent. All six Canadian stations with directional patterns are shown on one map, the last map in the book. For those wishing to see circles for the "graveyard" channels, check the latest NRC Publications Catalog for the latest edition of the Station Location Map Book. In the loose leaf format, the index for each map is on the back of the preceding page. Because of the increase in stations on most of the old clear channels, each frequency has it's own map and index. Patterns for active Construction Permits are show in most cases while Applications for new stations are not. The book is updated through January 1, 1996. Patterns shown for WOWO and WLIB on 1190 are the new patterns for the Construction permits issued after the 16th edition of the AM Radio Log was published. The maps and patterns a roughly the same scale throughout the book.

We will acknowledge the fact that some frequencies are a little difficult to read, especially in the north east and Atlantic states. If you live in those regions just turn on your radio and you'll be able to hear why these maps look crowded and difficult to read.

From us at the National Radio Club Publications Center and the membership of the National Radio Club, thank you for purchasing this publication. Enjoy!
